AMERICANS FLEE FROM MEXICO

Girls Deny Miss Lambert Was in Suicide Mood

DISCOVER BULLET WOUND

Jamaica Plain Patrolman "Too Scared" to Report Accident; 14-Year-Old Lad Died in Store

Kenneth P. Meyers, son of Patrolman Isaac Meyers of Jamaica Plain, died last night in a store on Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, and it was given out then that he had been "taken suddenly sick."

But today Medical Examiner Magrath reported that the boy died from a bullet wound.

Police headquarters then gave it out that they believed the bullet had come from some distance.

But a little later Captain Harriman of the Jamaica Plain station announced that Patrolman Pulsifer had told him that the boy was killed by a bullet from Patrolman Pulsifer's revolver, fired accidentally.

"I asked him why he did not report the tragedy last night," said Captain Harriman. "He said he was scared."

"I did not report the incident because I thought the boy died of excitement. I knew he suffered from heart trouble."

DISCOVERS BULLET WOUND.

The circumstances surrounding the tragedy are strangely involved.

Young Meyers was fourteen years old. His father, Patrolman Isaac Meyers, lives at No. 8 Enfield street, Jamaica Plain.

Branford Yuil keeps a store at No. 95 Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, and employs George Hickox as a clerk.

It was there the tragedy occurred. When the boy fell, Dr. Max Gropper was summoned from his office at No. 387 Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain.

He prescribed for the boy and ordered him taken to the City Hospital.

But the boy died in the store. Medical Examiner Magrath took charge of the body, performed an autopsy today and found a bullet wound. He reported the boy died of a bullet wound.

Police headquarters said that before he died the boy said he heard a loud explosion, then felt nervous and dropped to the floor.

They announced the theory that the bullet came from a distance.

But Captain Harriman of Station 13 called Patrolman Pulsifer and ques-

British Destroyer Is Sunk in Collision

London, June 17.—The British destroyer Eden has been sunk in the English Channel in collision with another vessel, the Admiralty announced today. Thirty-one members of the crew were saved. Three officers are missing.

The collision occurred last night. The Eden displaced 555 tons and was built in 1903. She was equipped with four three-inch guns and two eight-inch torpedo tubes. The lost ship was 220 feet long and 23 feet in the beam. Her normal crew consisted of seventy men.

LATEST WAR BULLETINS.

London, June 17.—A Central News dispatch from The Hague says that the German cruiser von Der Thann was badly damaged in the sea fight off Jutland and has just been towed into Wilhelmshaven for repairs. The von Der Thann is an 18,800-ton ship mounting 11 and 6-inch guns. She was put in commission in 1907.

Paris, June 17.—German aeroplanes have again bombarded Dunkirk, the French War Office announced today. Another squadron of machines shelled Bar Le Duc. Four persons were killed and fifteen wounded.

ULMER IS FOUND NOT GUILTY IN LIBEL CASE

W. Edwin Ulmer, an attorney, was today found not guilty by a jury in the Superior Court on four counts of criminal libel again Dr. Peer P. Johnson of the Beverly Hospital, Andrew W. Rogers and Jasper R. Pope, president and vice-president respectively of the Beverly National Bank, and J. Elmer Wood, a Beverly automobile dealer.

Ulmer was charged with having caused to be published in a Boston paper a libelous statement in connection with civil actions brought in behalf of Mrs. Mary Alice Bennett, widow of Allen H. Bennett of Beverly. Bennett died in the Beverly Hospital, and it was the contention in the actions brought for his widow that he had not received proper care.

The case has been heard before Judge Hardy and a jury for several days past, the verdict being brought in this morning.

Italian Ship Sunk.

London, June 17.—The Italian steamer Motia, of 500 tons gross, has been sunk.

WAKELIN AGAIN TALKS APPEAL TO M'CALL

Failure of the police to apprehend the brutal murderer of little Loretta Wakelin of Melrose has resulted in the statement made by her father, Joseph Wakelin, that he would appeal to the Governor.

A short time ago Mr. Wakelin made the same statement, but did not carry out his intention, as the police showed signs of activity.

"It is now more than two weeks since the child was murdered," Mr. Wakelin said to the AMERICAN, "and the police apparently have made no headway. There have been all kinds of clews, but they have not amounted to anything. Day after day we have waited, hoping that news would be received that the murderer was to be brought to justice. We are sick of waiting. I thought the offer of $500 reward would result in the capture of the brute who killed Tootie but it has not done so.

"The police seem to be absolutely helpless, and to bolster up their reputations have been frequently announcing that they would make an arrest momentarily. Why don't they make an arrest if they suspect anyone? If anyone is under suspicion that person should be given a chance to say something.

"The police do not do business that way, however, and I have decided to ask Governor McCall to take up the matter."

MALDEN DOCTOR, ILL IN FRANCE, BETTER

DENY TALE OF DAVIS GIRL

16 Chums of Marian Lambert Testify She Seemed Happy; Hint Miss Davis Loved Orpet

Waukegan, Ill., June 17.—The 16 girl friends of Marian Lambert—the surviving remnant of "the old eighteen bunch"—came into the court room today one by one to give the lie to the story that Marian ever intended committing suicide or that she was despondent before her tragic death in Helm's woods.

These were the girls who were Marian Lambert's closest chums when she was alive and they had formed this little "Club" the "Eighteen Bunch." They were all at her birthday party on February 6, three days before her tragic death in Helm's Woods. Three girls who were graduated night before last came to court today arrayed in bright schoolgirl garb. They chattered incessantly before court was called to order.

The single theme that threaded their excited outbursts was a mutual hatred and contempt for "Joe" Davis, who was one of the eighteen until she "betrayed" her dead chum.

GIRL ON STAND.

Bernice Wells of Lake Forest was the first of the "Eighteen" to take the stand.

She was questioned by Attorney Daily.

Q.—Did you know Marian Lambert? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you present at her eighteenth birthday party? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many girls were there? A.—Eighteen of us.

Q.—Was she, during the last three months of her lifetime, whenever you saw her, happy or unhappy? A.—She seemed happy. (Objection overruled.)

Q.—Did you see any tears at her birthday party? A.—Yes, once.

Q.—Who was present when anyone cried? A.—I do not remember exactly.

Q.—Who cried? A.—Anna Paulson.

Q.—Did you see Marian cry? A.—No, I was told afterward she did.

Q.—What was she crying about? A.—Because Anna wanted to spend the night with Marian.

Q.—Now, you say Marian always seemed happy, was she happy at her birthday party? A.—Yes, very happy, apparently.

A long discussion in private was then had between Judge Donnelly and all the attorneys on the admissibility of the evidence. Attorney Wilkerson having objected to Miss Wells testifying as to Marian's happiness, as it was a conclusion of the witness. Then Daily asked:

Q.—What did she say to you when you left her? A.—That she would see Eleanor Double and myself the next Sunday. (Objection overruled.)

TOOK SOME PICTURES.

Q.—When did you take some pictures? A.—On afternoon.

Q.—Who took them? A.—I took some and Marian took some.

Q.—Did you see Josephine Davis at

STUDENTS' PARTY IS UPSET

Two Harvard Freshmen and Two Women Thrown Out as Auto Is Wrecked; None Badly Hurt

Charles Edward Hodges, Jr., of Brookline and Esleeck Sheldon Sherman of "Eastcliffe," Rye, N. Y., both Harvard freshmen, with two young women, said by the police to be Belle Townsend and Mae Thompson of Boston, had a near-fatal accident early today when the automobile in which they were returning to Boston overturned on the Newburyport trunpike in East Saugus.

Young Hodges, owner and driver of the machine and Sherman, were pinned beneath the wreckage, while the young women were thrown clear, escaping uninjured. The students were bruised and Hodges sustained a cut on one hand, but they were able to leave the scene in a passing automobile.

According to the police the young people were returning to Boston shortly after midnight, and Hodges was teaching one of his guests how to drive.

Although the machine was tearing along at a rapid pace the young woman, who was somewhat drowsy, failed to keep her mind on her work, with the result that at the corner of Broadway and Main street, East Saugus, the automobile skidded, crashed into an electric light pole and overturned.

Jacob Shapiro of Main street, who lives but a short distance from the scene of the accident, was awakened by the crash, followed by shrieks from the women. He rushed from the house, he told the police, and found the two girls standing by the wrecked machine, beneath which their escorts were lying helpless.

Shapiro said that the women urged him to telephone for an ambulance and that he did so. When he returned, however, the youths had managed to extricate themselves and seemed to be but little the worse for their adventure. All four started down the road toward Lynn, but were overtaken by another automobile, which they entered and were whirled away.

Chief of Police Charles O. Thompson of Saugus was immediately notified and began a thorough investigation of the accident.

Both of the young men involved have rooms at Standish Hall, Cambridge. Young Hodges is the son of the treasurer of the Mutual Liability Insurance Company of State street, and is listed as the owner of the machine, which was a complete wreck.

BRAVES CALL OFF THE SECOND GAME

Just after 2 o'clock Business Manager Hapgood announced that the game scheduled between the Pirates and the Braves for this afternoon was off. The heavy rainfall, which offered no sign of stopping, effectively prevented any baseball in Boston today. The Braves leave Boston tomorrow morning for Newport, where they play an exhibition game, and Sunday night they go to New York by one of the Fall River liners from Newport.

Mexico's Entire Navy in Harbor at Mercy of U. S.

New Orleans, June 17.

NOTWITHSTANDING that the relations between the United States and Mexico are daily expected to snap, Mexico's entire navy, with the exception of one transport, is in port here for repairs. The guns are dismounted, and the ships could be seized without a shot. In the holds of the vessels are stored large quantities of arms and ammunition.

The fleet consists of the armored gunboats Progresso and Zarm Goza and the transport Atlanta.

8 MORE ARSON INDICTMENTS; 2 ARRESTS

The special Grand Jury which has been investigating the so-called "ring" arson in Suffolk County, today completed its work by reporting eight more secret indictments, bringing the total up to seventy-one. More than thirty arrests have already been made.

Two arrests were made today. Harry Finer of No. 52 Morris street, East Boston, was charged with conspiring to burn that building and with conspiring to burn a building at No. 48-50 Chester avenue, Chelsea. Hyman Cohen of the Morris street address was charged with burning that building and with conspiring to burn it.

Samuel Lishner, one of the men indicted this week, was arraigned on two indictments today charging arson and burning a building in an attempt to defraud an insurance company. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $7,500.

In connection with the arson cases District Attorney Pelletier today issued a statement, explaining the manner in which the business has been carried on, and extolling the men who have been instrumental in securing the indictments.

He also suggested that the handling of such cases be given over entirely in Boston to the local police, instead of to the State Police as at present, in order to prevent divided responsibility.

PELLETIER'S STATEMENT.

District Attorney Pelletier's statement follows:

"The Grand Jury after sitting since January last have adjourned, and their term of service will expire June 30. They will not be called together again unless some special matter should arise.

"In addition to the regular work which consumes the first week of each month, the present Grand Jury have given many extra days to an investigation of the fire situation in Boston.

"This investigation has been conducted with the advice of Assistant District Attorney Melsace and the assistance of Thomas F. Lynch and Thomas Towle of the Boston police department, and Edward J. Sherlock and Thomas A. Thompson of the Massachusetts District Police. The result has been that the Grand Jury upon the evidence have returned seventy-one indictments for arson or similar offences.

"The Grand Jury have necessarily in the course of their investigation received much information regarding fires in this county, and while they have no statements to make regarding the indictments found and how

FEAR WAR WITH MEXICO IS NEAR

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE.

Washington, June 17.—American citizens are in flight from Mexico.

The army transport Sumner is now rushing under full speed to Tampico to take all Americans from that port.

A report was circulated in army circles here today that all State militia organizations would be called out for use in Mexico before the end of next week. One official stated that arrangements are now being made for the general call, and it would be issued within a few days.

The naval transport Hancock, now at Santo Domingo City, is expected to arrive at Vera Cruz to take on Americans by Monday night, and the Prairie, at Mnte Christo, Santo Domingo, to arrive at Key West, Fla., by Tuesday, to be ready to go to the relief of Americans in Mexico.

State Department advices today reported a general flight of American citizens from Mexico to the United States. About seventy have reached Eagle Pass and Laredo from Tampico. Fourteen left Progresso yesterday, and fifteen at Parral are now trying to get back to the United States.

Consul-General Philip C. Hanna, stationed at Monterey, Mex., this afternoon reported to the State Department that he had arrived at Laredo, Tex., having fled from his post because of threatened danger. There have been several anti-American demonstrations there, according to earlier reports.

There are believed to be 180 American citizens at Tampico. The orders were secretly issued yesterday, and the Sumner is now on her way to that port from Newport News, Va.

In naval circles it was learned that the State Department has instructed Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt to use every means of getting Americans out of Mexico coast towns "before the break comes."

News of the threat of General Trevino against American troops has resulted in the administration's note of refusal to withdraw the troops from Mexico being held up at the State Department. Secretary Lansing today announced that the note would not be dispatched at present. It was planned to send it last night.

MEXICANS FOLLOW THREAT BY ARMING FOR WAR ON U. S.

'CONVENTIONS WERE PINK TEA, BARBECUE AND REVIVAL'--COBB

By IRVIN S. COBB.

Copyright, 1916, by the Central Press Association.

St. Louis, Mo., June 17.—As I look back on the three national conventions that I have attended these past two weeks, I see one of them as an elaborate social event attended by correctly attired gentlemen guests, one as a barbecue where a crowd that already is well fed but still hungry keeps sending its plates back for more, and one as a religious revival marred only by the fact that the chief evangelist, who, in a way of speaking, is also the self-annointed Messiah of the congregation, deserts his followers at the very moment when they stand most in need of leadership.

The 5 o'clock tea affair was the Republican convention. Of this function it might be said that the acoustics of the hall were excellent and that the band from time to time rendered some very pleasing selections, also that all present deported themselves in the most refined and cultivated manner possible to imagine.

The barbecue was the Democratic convention. Portly with patronage, plumped out with the sow-belly and turnip greens of office, the multitude came, smiled at the world, greasy smile, patting itself on the back, looking backward to four fat years and happily hoping the next four would not be lean ones.

It exhaled the odor of fried chitterlings, and threw off the pleasing sound of cracklings turning crisp in the skillet.

It was not nearly so cultured a gathering as the pink tea, but those present had a better time I think.

POLITICS A RELIGION.

The camp meeting was the Progressive convention. With these progressives, politics was more than a habit as with the Republicans; more than an occupation as with the Democrats. With them politics approximated a religion. They worked up real coolness to a crew rather than practiced, according to a formula. They had one apostle and one only. Roosevelt was their John the Baptist. Even him they were prepared to live on locusts and wild honey, to wear goatskins in a cave, and to fight on, not for spoils and jobs, but for a principle.

When he ran away and left them they did what almost any group of zealots do whose cult is wrapped about the personality of an individual, whose creed is his spoken word, and whose wish is his will, when that individual departs from among them. Their hallelujas turned to lamentations.

There was something inspirational about the Progressi a convention in its early stages. There was something pathetic about it, too. Home from all but the handwagon. And now then, boys, altogether—three cheers and a tiger for unlimited sparerib, plenty of hams in the smoke house, the full dinner pail, peace with preparedness and the good old, cross barred, deep dish prosperity pie."

WHOOPED IT UP.

So by the heaping platters, the steaming trenchers they whooped it up until the whoopers were hoarse and the chief whooper had endorsed the platform. Then Washington, D. C., by long-distance and then they called it a day and left rejoicing.

There was one touch of sentiment in the Democratic convention when an adjournment was taken in respect to the memory of Tom Pence, the dead secretary of the national committee, and one of the whitest, cleanest newspapermen that ever lived on this earth.

There was a big touch of sentiment when the chairman of the Progressives introduced Judge Jackson, an old white-haired delegate from Tennessee, an ex-Confederate soldier, who stood there on the platform, holding in one hand the flag of the Lost Cause, for which he had fought 50 years and more, and in the other the flag of his country, the Stars and Stripes.

Both emblems dispensed with sentimental touches. Good business men are rarely sentimental. They haven't time for it.

ITALIAN CABINET ANNOUNCED TODAY

By International News Service.

Rome, June 17.—The new cabinet will be officially announced today. The new ministry will take the oath before King Victor Emmanuel on Sunday and will hold its first Cabinet meeting on Monday. It comprises eighteen members, including seven without portfolio. These are the Ministries of Works, Communications and Provisions.

All political parties are represented in the personnel of the new cabinet.

'Franz Josef's Body Used to Hide His Death'

By International News Service.

London, June 17.

THE death of Emperor Franz Josef is again reported by a neutral who has just returned from Vienna.

This traveler further asserts that the embalmed body of the monarch has been shown to crowds on patriotic occasions.

He says he was present when there was a demonstration before the palace, but the Emperor did not step out and show himself on the balcony, as was his custom. Instead, a chair was raised on which reclined the inanimate royal figure.

As the demonstrators sang patriotic songs, there was no movement observable on the part of the Emperor.

This person states he has ascertained that the fact that the Emperor has been embalmed is widely known in higher Viennese circles.

POLICE BULLET CAUSED DEATH OF BOY

tioned him at length. Afterward, he said:

SAYS CLERK HELD GUN.

"The facts as I get them are these: The boy was shot, in the store, with a bullet from Patrolman Pulsifer's revolver.

"Patrolman Pulsifer, shortly before he went off duty, went into the store to buy a paper.

"The boy came in a moment later.

"Then Clerk Hickox told Patrolman Pulsifer that he had a bargain, a revolver.

"He passed it across the counter to Pulsifer. The patrolman examined it and said the handle was out as good as that on his weapon.

"He took his gun and showed it to Hickox and passed it across the counter.

"It exploded. The patrolman says it was in Hickox's hand when it exploded.

"The boy dropped. The bullet was in him.

"Pulsifer made no report on the tragedy. I asked him why he did not. He said he was scared.

"Pulsifer has been thirty years on the force, and has a good record."

THOUGHT BOY HAD FAINTED.

Later, Superintendent Crowley of police headquarters, came out a statement telling what had happened. His account of the events leading up to the shooting was substantially the same as that of Captain Harrison, except that he said Pulsifer had not yet gone on duty. He continued:

"Pulsifer thought the boy had fainted from fright. Dr. Groppner, who was summoned, said the boy died of heart failure.

"Patrolman Pulsifer reported for roll call and went on duty all night as usual. He went home this morning, but said nothing to his family of the explosion. He did not report the shooting at roll call last night.

"The whole matter will be put before Judge Kearns in West Roxbury Court, and it will be left to the judge if a charge will be preferred against either Pulsifer or Hickox, or both."

Patrolman Pulsifer had this to say today:

The dead boy was the only son and the oldest child of his parents. He was to have graduated from the Agassiz grammar school Wednesday. He was a member of the Boy Scouts of the Central Congregational Church, Jamaica Plain. The Rev. Channing H. Hawkins of that church will officiate at his funeral Monday.

HAWSER TAKES OFF FISHERMAN'S LEG

Gloucester, June 17.—The fishing schooner Good Luck proved to be just the reverse for Walter Surette, a member of the crew, who lost his left leg as the vessel was being tied up to a local wharf. Surette's leg was caught in the bight of a hawser on which the schooner was riding and was torn off. Improvised tourniquets were applied and the man was rushed to the hospital where he was reported to be in a serious condition. The Good Luck had been engaged in off-shore fishing for two weeks, just making port.

ONE DEAD, 15 HURT IN STRIKE BATTLE

Oakland, Calif., June 17.—One man was shot dead and fifteen others wounded as the result of a pitched battle between employes of the Sunset Lumber Company and one hundred strike sympathizers, which has been in progress along the water front for some weeks.

ARSON CASES REVIEWED BY PELLETIER

pending they authorize the following statement to be made by me in the hope that it may be of some help to them in protecting the property of their lives and property from the awful calamity of incendiarism.

"It is a common knowledge that investigations in other cities have uncovered arson trusts, that is, well-planned schemes by which one or a group or band of individuals to secure property covered with insurance and then causing it to be burned and collecting the insurance.

"So far as Boston is concerned the Grand Jury are of opinion, without making comparison with other cities and without intimating that such conditions exist elsewhere, that in and about Boston there have been many fires started by comparatively few individuals, some of whom would appear to have made more than one fire not in absolute collusion.

"The typical method is to purchase for a small sum equity for a property sum covered by first and second mortgages, property that needed improvement or rendered by the Board of Health, and directly after the purchase of the property in order to make the required improvements a fire would be set in the building, the largest possible insurance having in the meantime been secured.

"The proceeds of the fire would be devoted to the improvement of the property, and if the loss is not sufficient to secure the desired improvements, another fire would be set, and in the end all the improvements made on the property would be paid for out of the insurance company, and the equities would then have become valuable and marketable.

"These facts do not relate to any particular case, but are the result of the general investigation and are perfectly well known to the insurance companies and police.

HOW INSURANCE IS PLACED.

"The great trouble seems to be that men are able to get larger insurance than the character and condition of the building would seem to justify. The amount of insurance seems to be left very largely to the agent, and the agent's commission is based entirely on the amount of insurance written.

"It is claimed that it would be a financial impossibility for insurance companies to make an actual examination of each piece of property offered for insurance on the present premium basis, and that the process would not permit the expense of an examination of the moral risk, that is, an investigation into the character of the person seeking the insurance.

"These are problems which the Grand Jury does not attempt to solve. They call them to the attention of the public fatal inasmuch as people should be aware of them in the hope that somewhere, somehow, some improvement in this direction may be obtained.

"It would at least seem that a cancellation of a policy after a suspicious fire would in many cases save a further loss from incendiarism. It would seem that competition among insurance companies is such that in cases where one company cancels, another seems willing to take up the risk on new insurance.

"These, again, are of course problems of the legislature and legislation, which the Grand Jury cannot hope to correct.

"INDEPENDENT ADJUSTERS."

"It may be at least, in a well-policed city like Boston, advisable to charge the police department with the investigation of fires over which now primarily rests with the State police. And while there has been no conflict between the State police and the Boston police, best results are not obtainable in this line of detective work where there is a divided responsibility.

"So far as professional independent adjusters are concerned it would appear that there are many such doing business in proper fashion, but there without at all attempting to characterize those who are in the field there can be no doubt that there are or have been some so-called professional independent adjusters who have been prone to the exercise of reasonable intelligence ought to know was criminal. Fraud was being perpetrated and that the fire was the result of incendiarism.

"How far such men can be controlled is a matter for the Legislature to determine. They should be found to be some control. These adjusters should be men of the highest type, as they undoubtedly are in many cases now.

"OVER-INSURANCE" EVIL.

"In addition to the fires involving dwellings and buildings there are the fires on merchandise. And here again it seems to be possible to secure insurance on a stock of merchandise for practically any amount desired by the insured without any effort on the part of any one to appraise the merchandise at its actual value. While dishonest people live this seems to be an open invitation and temptation to start fires.

"It would seem that a very small percentage of the fires is due to so-called 'firebugs,' those who want the excitement of witnessing conflagration. On the other hand, a very large number is due to the fact that there are men who for a stated amount will arrange and produce a fire in the most ingenious and scientific manner. The amount asked by these men will vary from a very few dollars up into the thousands.

"It goes without saying that overinsurance is really the main cause of arson. Although criminal prosecutions will have their effect, in crimes prompted by greed for money and where an easy way of getting it is afforded in the form of strikes, the criminal courts cannot correct the whole evil.

"The Grand Jury have been informed that since this investigation started there has not been a single fire of a suspicious nature in the building trade if, therefore, the insurance companies and the individual householder and property owner will co-operate there can be little question but that the conditions in the future will show a great improvement.

"The foregoing relates only to buildings, merchandise and dollars, but greater than all these is the awful danger to human life and the actual loss of life that so often follows the crime of arson. Lives are staked like mere pawns in order that a dishonest dollar may be gathered in, and frequently only the efficient service of the fire department has prevented some dreadful holocaust."

warning had been given by General Trevino, Carranza commander, that if any more Americans crossed the border they would be attacked. Trevino, declaring that he acted for his government, also threatened to attack American troops already in Mexico if there were any movement by them. This is accepted as a threat of war.

General Funston's dispatch follows:

Following by telephone from General Bell at El Paso.

"Word has reached El Paso that Trevino states if any more troops cross border or any attempt is made to move troops already in mexico they will be attacked by Mexican forces. (Signed) "FUNSTON."

Mexico and the United States are closer to war today than they have been since the present crisis began.

Fears have grown to practically certainty along the border that hostilities cannot be avoided much longer.

American patrols along the Rio Grande are being strengthened. Heavy forces of troops are being massed at strategic points.

All United States soldiers under command of General Bell, approximately 3,500, were sent to their posts last night with 250 rounds of ammunition. This is the quantity a soldier receives for going into battle.

PURSUED BANDITS.

General Funston stated positively that Major Alonzo Gray of the Fourteenth Cavalry had crossed the Rio Grande River into Mexico, when pursuing bandits that raided San Ignacio, Tex., killing three American soldiers. Major Gray crossed the river and went as far as Martino, where he lost trace of the bandits, and returned to the American soil. Major Gray found the body of one dead Mexican on American soil and captured two Mexicans who are supposed to have had part in the attack on the Americans.

Information from Washington today showed that the official view of the situation was equally grave.

army officers at Washington, according to latest dispatches, are considering ready for intervention. The officers do not attempt to disguise their belief that this drastic step will be forced on the United States before the end of this month.

A significant paragraph in the Washington dispatches reads thus:

"Talk of getting ready for any eventuality has ceased. They (army officers) know what they are getting ready for."

Washington believes that within the next few days the Mexican authorities will drop all pretense of being "friendly" to Americans, either military or civilians. These war developments leading to the belief are:

1—The threat sent to General Pershing by General Trevino at Chihuahua City.

2—The raid of last night east of San Benito.

3—The arming of Mexican civilians at Juarez by General Francisco Gonzales, commander of the Carranza garrison across the river.

Dispatches from Washington say further that Assistant Secretary of War Ingraham has received several code messages from the border and communicated the contents to Secretary of State Lansing. The messages have been held secret. Army officers here, however, expressing a call to result from the messages for more State militia for use on the border.

NEEDS MORE TROOPS.

With the American punitive expedition practically surrounded by 35,000 Carranza soldiers, officers in Washington say it is imperative that General Pershing receive additional troops, and that militia would be used to take the places vacated by regular army soldiers taken away from patrol duty on the border.

The Carranza responsibility for the peremptory withdrawal note sent by General Trevino to General Pershing is reported in information received here today from Juarez. This report has it that General Trevino says that General Carranza instructed him to send the warning to Pershing.

When word of the Trevino message was received at Fort Bliss, General Bell, the commander of the garrison, ordered all officers and troops in the district to report immediately and hold themselves in readiness for any developments.

50,000 MEN IN CHIHUAHUA.

Almost simultaneously with information of the Trevino note word was received from Juarez that the de facto government was recruiting all Mexicans between the ages of seventeen. It was said that General Alvaro Obregon, the Minister of War in the Carranza government, was using measures which amount to nothing short of conscription. There are said to be 50,000 Mexican troops in the State of Chihuahua alone, not counting those in the other States of the Northern Mexico.

For the time being the pursuit of Francisco Villa has been forgotten. The attention of everyone on the border is now centred upon the developments of affairs at Juarez. Gen. Bell, Major General Carranza and General Obregon are now staying there.

There is high tension in Juarez. Patriotic meetings are being held there and inflammatory American speeches are made.

The lives of civilian Americans in Mexico are in graver danger than at any other time since the Mexican revolution began, a responsible United States government.

Street car service between El Paso and Juarez, which was stopped last night on account of the anti-American demonstration in the Mexican city, has been resumed.

American army officers are puzzled as to where the Mexican forces have been able to acquire such large amounts of arms and ammunition, as shipments from this country are now forbidden. But while the Mexicans are well equipped with arms, they lack everything else necessary to carry on war. In most of the cities throughout the republic famine is raging and people are clamoring for bread.

Like the Trevino message to Pershing, the action of arming Mexican citizens at Juarez seems to have been inspired by orders from "higher up." More than 1,000 persons were summoned to the general barracks, and were given rifles to fight American soldiers. The distribution was supervised by General Gonzales, commanding the Juarez garrison, but he acted, so far as can be learned, under direct orders of General Trevino and the latter, it is believed, received his instructions direct from War Minister Obregon.

RIFLES DISTRIBUTED.

Thus the most overt and sinister developments had their source in the actual Mexican administration.

The distribution of rifles was promptly reported to General Bell, who mobilized his entire fighting strength, ordered 250 rounds issued to each night patrols and doubled the river and bridge guards.

The alarm spread with excitement all night. Shortly after 10 o'clock General Bell commandeered all the extra cots in the city. These, early were rushed to Fort Bliss and Camp Cotton.

Camp Cotton is in the southern section of El Paso, within a stone's throw of Mexico.

A few Americans who crossed into the little town stayed only long enough to get word of the prevailed hostility and then crossed back to El Paso.

As early as 8 o'clock last night conductors on the street car line refused to go into Juarez. Passengers were told the feeling prevailing was the ugliest in the four years of border trouble.

MEXICANS ARMED.

General Bell, commander of the troops stationed here for the protection of El Paso and the border in the immediate vicinity, issued orders at 1:30 yesterday afternoon to assemble the entire force.

The only explanation for the order was that unusual activity on the part of the Carranza garrison at Juarez had been noticed through secret service agents. Gen. Gonzales, the Juarez commander, had posted an order calling all Mexicans over seventeen years of age to the curriel for military instruction.

Five thousand additional Mexican troops had been brought to points along the Mexican Central Railroad north of Villa Ahumada, presumably as reinforcements for the Juarez garrison.

The total number of troops in General Bell's command is approximately 8,500, including several pieces of heavy artillery. He said he was satisfied that the situation could be controlled without serious danger to life or property in El Paso.

NEW RAID IN U. S.

Mexican bandits crossed the border twelve miles east of El Paso yesterday afternoon and raided the small town of Noria, N. M.

Several Americans were at first said to have been killed, but it was not stated whether they were civilians or United States soldiers. The first reports came by telephone. Later the wires were cut of communication.

Still later the sheriff at Noria, N. M., reported to General Bell that one American was killed in the raid at that place. There were, he said, no American casualties.

Three automobile trucks were started from Fort Bliss with a detachment of soldiers, who will reinforce the civilian guards organized by the residents of the community.

Mexicans Arrest Foreign Bankers

By International News Service.

Mexico City, June 17.—Military authorities have arrested W. F. Bank of London and Mexico, one of the principal financial institutions. They also arrested William Homer, a German, who is the assistant manager of the twelve other men connected with the bank.

The cause of the arrests was the refusal of the bank to accept 400,000 pesos in old currency in payment of obligations.

All the prisoners, several of whom are foreigners, were released from jail later, pending a decision in the cases. The bank's vaults have been closed and sealed by the six foreign consuls representing the nations interested.

Deny Gavira Has Been Executed

El Paso, June 17.—General Gabriel Gavira, until recently commander of the Carranza garrison at Juarez, has not been executed at Mexico City, according to a message received here today by Andreas Garcia, the Mexican consul in this city. The message came from Minister of War Obregon himself and it not only denied that Gavira had been executed but also denied that he has yet reached the capital. The message follows:

"Your message received. You can deny emphatically news that El Paso morning newspapers published relative to execution of General Gavira. The General has not reached the capital and is at Cuernavaca, State of Morelos."

(Signed) "Secretary of War."

New England at War

Not all New England, perhaps, but a decidedly interesting group of young Bostonians and New Englanders.

They are skirmishing through the woods around Plattsburg at a great rate. Each battle has its list of killed and wounded. Some of the Boston boys have been killed as often as the Crown Prince, wounded as often as the Kaiser and captured as often as von Kluck.

Willard H. Davis is one of them. He went up there for the AMERICAN, and his daily letters with their chatty details of the camp life and the battles and sudden deaths are good reading. Watch for them; and watch, particularly, for the unusually interesting letter to be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN—with an ample outlay of photographs from the camp.

ROOSEVELT BETTER TODAY

By International News Service.

New York, June 17.—Colonel Roosevelt passed a comfortable night and was announced at the Hotel Langham by his secretary, John F. Meredith, that he is feeling much better today. The pain in the Colonel's left side has abated, although he is still suffering from traces of pleurisy. Colonel Roosevelt is feeling so well that he plans to return to Oyster Bay later in the day," said Mr. McGrath. "I expects to motor back and will be accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt."

NOTICE IS NORMAL.

For the first time in several days, Colonel Roosevelt's voice sounded normal. His throat affliction compelled him to speak in a whisper and he was warned by his physicians to talk as little as possible until the inflammation subsided. Just before the Colonel went to the office of Arthur B. Deuel, one of the two physicians attending him. There he had his throat sprayed.

Despite his announcement that he was returned to private life and is out of politics, the colonel will be very busy next week conferring with leaders of the Progressive party.

Governor Hiram Johnson of California, who is in New York, had an appointment to see Colonel Roosevelt this afternoon before the colonel starts for home.

MAY SEE PERKINS.

It is expected that the colonel will hold a series of conferences with George W. Perkins, the chief financial backer of the Progressive party, although no announcement was made on this matter at the Langdon. There was still much discussion in political circles today over the possibility of an agreement between the Republicans and Progressives as indicated by the Whitman-Perkins conference on Friday.

CARDINAL TELLS FALSE IDEAS ON CHURCH

After officiating at an impressive confirmation service in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross this morning, at which a large class of candidates received the sacrament, Cardinal O'Connell spoke to those he had confirmed upon the importance of the occasion and its meaning to them as members of the Catholic church.

In the course of his discourse the Cardinal said:

"Many, misled by the false maxims of a shallow world, thought of the church as a social inferior—a gathering place of the poor and unlettered.

"And one day they woke up to find that the truth is, that she is the true aristocrat of all organizations, where the rich and poor speak, nor feel either wealth or poverty, where the prince kneels side by side with the beggar; where the Pasteurs and the Newmans read from the same book, as the apple woman and the cobbler, the sacred psalm of a holy life where worldly snobbery has no place, and where the congregation is neither a pedantic group of intellectuals nor a gathering of social prigs, but merely and solely a body of simple worshippers at the altar of the true God.

"TERROR OF TYRANNY."

"The Unitarian was warned that he would lose the liberty of rationalism, and he finds that as a Catholic reason is only stimulated, not weakened; guided, not stifled by faith.

"The Congregationalist was warned that he would lose his religious democracy under the tyranny of prelates, and he finds that he has just begun to realize the full meaning of religious democracy in a world of faith, comprising all classes and all races.

"His terror of tyranny has turned out to be a mere bugbear born of a myth. He rarely sees or hears a prelate, and as for tyranny, he is to see the same gentle counsels of guidance for all alike, Pope and peasant.

"The Methodist is warned of the dangers of formalism, and he finds that until now he never realized how ritual protected him from liberties that were often ludicrous when they were not vulgar, and that outside the great central act of worship there is a whole universe where each soul is left absolutely free to find its own peaceful pastures of devotion.

"The Episcopalian is warned of the terrors of the papacy, and he finds that these terrors exist only in the imagination of excessively nationalised groups who seem never to realize that without a centre there can be no circle; that as far as they are concerned there was far more pretension in Canterbury than there ever found in Rome, and, moreover, everything merely national can lay no claim to being international or catholic.

MANY BLIND TO TRUTH.

"And so around the whole circle—many, very many, blind to the truth which, once the door is passed, once one enters in and really sees with one's own eyes, disappears into thin air, or into the mere vapor of imaginations when they come.

"And to every one of you must come instinctively the wonder why others do not see as you now see. How is it that those who admit this tremendous spiritual power pass it by unheeded? Why do those who pose for learned men ignore a phenomenon which, even as a natural social fact, challenges the attention of observant men? There is the mystery. Who can solve it?"

TO APPOINT HUGHES' SUCCESSOR IN FALL

Washington, D. C., June 17.—Appointment of an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States to fill the vacancy caused when Justice Hughes resigned to accept the Republican nomination for the Presidency probably will not be made before early Fall, it was stated at the Department of Justice today. The court now is in recess for the Summer, so no reason exists for an early appointment.

SLASHES QUINCY GIRL; SHOOTS HIMSELF

John Desalvo of Newcomb street, Quincy, cut off the nose of twenty-five-year-old Miss May Davis of Hancock street, that city, early today, and then shot himself through the head, inflicting a fatal wound.

The woman, who was unaware of the extent to which she was injured, was treated by Dr. Kling, who ordered her removal to the hospital. A short time later, Desalvo was taken there in an unconscious condition.

According to the police Desalvo, who is twenty-three years old, had been paying attentions to Mrs. Davis for some time, her husband having separated from her.

Last night, the police say, the couple went to Boston, returning on a train which reached the Quincy station at 12:38 this morning.

Mrs. Davis and young Desalvo left the train at the station, and as far as could be learned, were not quarreling.

A short time later the woman rushed into the office of Dr. Kling, blood streaming down from her face, and stated that Desalvo had cut her with a knife.

About five o'clock this morning Desalvo was found lying beneath a tree at the corner of Hancock and Dimock streets, a short distance from the railroad station. There was a bullet wound in his head, and he was unconscious. He was taken to the hospital, where it was said that he could not live.

A Liquor Board Sensation

Certainly the situation that confronts the Boston Excise Board is the most difficult that has been presented to it and to the Governor, who is responsible for the Board. A new chairman is in—tomorrow's Sunday American will tell you all about him. An old chairman is out and three of Boston's most populous suburbs are making a great protest over the location of more saloons in their respective sections. These questions, too, will be treated of at length in tomorrow's Sunday American.

POLICEMAN STABBED TO DEATH IS PLAN

Special Policeman Max Weinstein of the Elevated's platform force died at the Relief Hospital today from dirk wounds, and Antonio Insisi, a Spanish negro, is held in Charles Street Jail without bail on a murder charge.

Weinstein was stabbed while holding District at a lower square patrol box after having arrested the colored man for intoxication on the platform at the South Station station of the Elevated. This was at midnight.

Captain Alonzo C. Armstrong of police headquarters says that District not only admits having stabbed Weinstein, but also says that he had had trouble before with the special policeman at Northampton Street Elevated station, where Weinstein was previously on platform duty.

The tragedy shows, in the unofficial opinion of the police, the necessity of any special officer, Elevated guard, factory watchman or otherwise, being fully trained in handling prisoners.

SIMPLY HOLDING HIM.

According to the police version of the stabbing Weinstein was simply holding District by one wrist or arm, while waiting for the patrol wagon to arrive. The policeman apparently had not taken the precaution to slap the prisoner's pockets, just to make sure he had no knife or gun on him.

But Weinstein, possibly lacking the practice of handling all kinds of prisoners, was stabbed while holding the man at the box. The police say that District drew a pearl-handled dirk with an eight-inch, double-edged blade and swung with deadly accuracy on Weinstein's breast. The officer received several deep wounds on the chest and shoulders, losing his grip on the prisoner.

John J. Healy of No. 23 White street, East Boston, jumped to Weinstein's aid and was cut on the left shoulder. District broke away at a run. Patrolman Fred Finn of Lagrange street on night patrol, heard the clamor and put after District, accompanied by Patrick Donahue, the former Roxbury baseball player. Finn and Donahue caught and held the man, who was booked at Lagrange street for assault with intent to kill.

MURDER CHARGED.

When Weinstein died at the Relief Hospital the charge against District was raised to murder. He was taken to headquarters in the morning and was "mugged," measured and finger-printed. He told Captain Armstrong he was born in Spain, went to Argentina and came thence to Boston, living on Bradford street in the West End.

When told Weinstein was dead and the charge was murder, District said: "Well, that's a rather bad offence."

He went before Judge Creed in the city court without a lawyer, pleaded "not guilty" to murder and was held without bail for continued hearing on next Friday, June 23. Then he was sent to Charles street jail.

TO MAKE FILM ON "NATHAN HALE" HERE

William A. Brady, theatrical manager; Gale Kane, Clara Whipple and Robert Warwick, well-known film performers, have arrived in Boston and will start Monday, making a big feature built upon Clyde Fitch's play, "Nathan Hale."

The first showing will be at the Park Theatre, and it is through an arrangement with Manager Thomas D. Sorelro of that theatre that the picture is to be made in Boston.

An interesting feature is that some of the cast will be selected from patrons of the Park Theatre who are anxious to show in movies.

Each morning the actors will leave the Park Theatre in autos on the locations selected for the day's work. The film stars will appear in person at the Park each day during the taking of the picture.

GRAIN EXPERT, BORN IN MEDFORD, IS DEAD

By International News Service.

Chicago, June 17.—Parker H. Litchfield, one of the best authorities in the milling and grain business, died at his home here. Mr. Litchfield was president of the Modern Miller Company and treasurer of the Millers' National Federation. He was born in Medford, Mass., October 26, 1845. He married Susanna B. Marson of Gardiner, Me., in 1885. She survives. The burial will be next Monday morning from Grace Episcopal Church in Medford, Mass.

BIG INCREASE IN RAILROAD EARNINGS

Washington, June 17.—The Interstate Commerce Commission announced today that the 187 principal railroads of the United States earned $396 net per mile during April, an increase from $289 per mile during April, 1915. Total revenues for April amounted to $280,987,306; total operating expenses, $159,022,465, leaving a net total income of $91,063,841.

TO REVOKE LICENSES IS PLAN

Residents of Grove Hall, Dorchester and Roxbury, who have had liquor licenses moved to places in their neighborhoods by the old License Board, have taken heart from the appointment to the board of Fletcher Rannev to place of Edward A. Woods, and from the resignation of Charles R. Gow with Mr. Woods' vote to put saloons in the respective sections.

They are planning, it became known today, to move as soon as Mr. Ranney and the statement of Mr. Gow are confirmed, for revocation of the licenses for saloons in their neighborhoods.

By them, Governor McCall's action in superseding Mr. Woods and in accepting Mr. Gow's resignation, is strongly upheld. By others, the Governor is hotly criticised, and there are many who say the appointment of a political deal with the liquor interests to "knife" Governor Walsh at the last election, with the reorganization of the Licensing Board as compensation.

Mr. Ranney's name will come up for consideration by the Governor's Council next Wednesday. If it is predicted that his confirmation will be a matter of form. He will then take Mr. Woods' place in the board, and it is probable that a successor for Mr. Gow will be appointed, and perhaps confirmed, on the same day.

Here are some of the sharp utterances in support of the Governor's action, in criticism of it, and in defence and criticism of the board's policies:

JAMES A. BURNS, President of the East Boston Improvement Association:

We presented to the board our objection to a license in Orient Heights with 482 names signed to our petition—and you all know the result. The license was granted. But we are not licked by any means. Governor McCall treated us square and promised us a square deal and we have started in again for the fight of our lives.

THE REV. DR. CORTLAND MYERS, pastor of Tremont Temple:

Give everything we want to be fair. But the very persons who helped to elect the Governor are beginning to wonder what he means in this action on the licensing board. Robert A. Woods has stood for the cause of social and civic reform. He was not agreeable to the element which seeks to stop everything righteous in the interests of their own pocket books. Don't leave us in the dark, Governor McCall. Tell us, right from the shoulder, whether the licensing board is to be a board of the people or a board of the machine.

THE REV. SIMON BLINN BLUNT, pastor of All Saints' Church, Dorchester:

It is regrettable that the board should decide to place saloons in the midst of a residential section. But the expectations at present, are that the citizens will take further action before the new board. We don't intend to let the matter drop.

JAMES E. MAGUIRE, publisher of the East Boston Free Press:

How the licensing board could ignore the clergy and the people fighting to protect their churches and their homes in favor of a liquor dealer needs some further explanation than that given in their statement, which insolent said: "You will be obliged to take your share of the burden of liquor licenses." Making a "rum acre" out of Orient Heights to rival Bowdoin square, would be a share with a vengeance.

THE REV. CHARLES A. ULRICH, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church:

It is my only wish that the new members of the board will consider our plea and suspend the Orient Heights license until such time as they will grant us another public hearing.

ARTHUR H. JAMES DAVIS, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Massachusetts:

The upset in the licensing board is not easily comprehended by decency loving citizens. Mr. Woods has had no desire to force saloons upon Boston's residential parts, but he has had figures to show that voting license vote in the thickly settled wards of Boston has steadily increased, while the license vote in the residential suburbs has been steadily growing.

Mr. Woods was fearless in doing what he thought for the best interests of Boston as a whole. I cannot understand this act of Governor McCall unless some previous arrangement had been made—possibly at the time of election. It looks that way.

Governor McCall, in answering this charge, had said after his appointment of Ranney:

"The idea that the old board must be continued in office or else additional men made that a deal was made last Fall is preposterous. I have not seen fit to deny this story before, and dislike to dignify it with a denial now, but the fact is that previous to the election I did not even know that Mr. Woods was a member of the licensing board.

"As a matter of fact, I have not promised to appoint or not to appoint any man to any office, for the purpose of influencing my election or for any other purpose."

UNCLE SAM GAINS AS AUSTRIA LOSES

Ware, June 17.—While John Gula was being examined for naturalization in the Superior Court here, he had some difficulty in answering some of the questions about this Government. Finally Judge Irwin asked, "Well, you came from Austria. Now, supposing this country and Austria were to have war, which side would you fight for?"

John straightened up, raised his hand and said, "Me fight for American country."

"Good!" replied Judge Irwin. "You do for citizenship, I guess. It wasn't so much what you said as the way you said it."

Hold Suspect for Vicious Attack on Newton Brakeman

The Worcester police, acting on instructions from the Boston police, early today arrested a man riding on the brake beams of a freight train going through that city on the theory that he might be the man who assaulted Horace Deary, No. 225 Lexington street, Auburndale, a brakeman on the Boston & Albany.

Deary is at the Massachusetts General Hospital, suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and many wounds, received at the hands of his unknown assailant. The assault took place in the Allston freight yards. Deary was passing along beside his train on his way to the cab when he saw the man slipping onto the truck of one of the cars.

The man set upon Deary and beat him almost into insensibility. He was treated by Dr. McKeen of No. 544 Cambridge street, Allston, and afterward removed to the hospital. Deary described his assailant as being a colored man. The man whom the Worcester police today have in custody today is described as being a very dark-skinned mulatto. Boston officers will look him over today.

Father Appeals to East Boston Girl to Come Home

"Come home, Katherine, and don't be a little lost sister" is the appeal of John F. Mullen of No. 544 Bennington street, East Boston, to his daughter, Katherine, fifteen, who has been missing from her home since May 24. He has asked the Boston and suburban police to help find the girl, who is very pretty.

"Little Katherine's mother died twelve years ago," said Mr. Mullen, "and I brought her up with the assistance of her grandmother. I hope she will read my appeal and come home.

"Katherine was in the second year class in the East Boston High School. She left home at 9 a. m., May 24. I have not laid eyes on her since. She is a good girl, and hope no harm has befallen her.

A neighbor told me that Katherine had told her she was going to Milton to mind a baby for a woman. I do not know who the Milton woman could be. I'm suspicious of women who employ little girls to do work without consulting their parents.

"That's why I'm appealing to Katherine not to be counted with the little lost sisters."

Man in West End Walking in Sleep Falls Two Floors

Paul Isick, thirty-five, of Lovett place, West End, while walking in his sleep at his home early today, fell out of the window of his room on the second floor to the doorway below, receiving injuries from which it is thought he may die.

Isick, partly undressed, with a blanket wrapped around him, was found lying in a pool of blood by Joseph Stein of Charles street. At the Massachusetts General Hospital he was found to be suffering from a fractured left knee, a lacerated wound of the head and a possible fracture of the skull.

RUSSIAN AGENT SUED FOR DIVORCE

By International News Service.

New York, June 17.—Mme. Fernando Rocchi Riabouchinsky, named as one of the three most beautiful women in the world, has started suit for divorce against Nicholas Riabouchinsky, purchasing agent for the Russian government, recently reported to have lost $45,000 in a roulette game.

The complaint in the divorce action merely asserts that the defendant has been unduly friendly with "an unknown woman." Riabouchinsky denies the charge.

The noted beauty married Riabouchinsky, an art connoisseur and member of the nobility, in Paris in 1914.

TWO AMERICANS WOUNDED IN FRANCE

By International News Service.

Paris, June 17.—Fred Hollinshed of Spata, N. J., and Jacob Wendell, member of the Norton unit of the American ambulance, have been wounded by fragments of a shell.

The latter, who is a member of the Harvard Club, was injured in the arm, although not seriously. Wendell was struck in the back. His condition is not dangerous.

They were taken in an ambulance to Hospital Auxiliaire of Fort Douumont on Tuesday and are now at the American ambulance hospital at Neuilly.

BOY FATALLY HURT WHEN HIT BY AUTO

Crushed beneath the wheels of an automobile, Jacob Greenberg, nine, of Lowell street, died at the Relief Hospital. The driver, Wyndham G. Jordan of Cottage street, East Somerville, was arrested on a charge of manslaughter. The machine is owned by Michael D'Arcy & Son of Washington street, north.

POSTPONE RALLY OF BOY SCOUTS

The rally of the Boy Scouts of the Greater Boston district, which was to have been held in the Harvard Stadium today, was called off this morning by the committee in charge. It will be held in the Stadium next Saturday, beginning at 2:15 o'clock. Tickets distributed for today's rally will be good for next Saturday.

RAIN CALLS OFF THE PARADE

The parade and all the other outdoor features of the Bunker Hill celebration in Charlestown were called off because of the rain.

Councillor Timothy J. Hurley and Clerk of Committees John Dever of the celebration committees said the parade would probably take place July 4, when the district will have a double celebration.

CLUB LATCHSTRINGS OUT.

A wet and bedraggled Charlestown looked out to a rainy world with bunting and flags drooping dejectedly from the buildings and staffs and thousands of spirited celebrators trying vainly to dodge the raindrops and searching the skies for a ray of sunshine.

According to long-established custom the navy yard salute of twenty-one guns was fired by a battery. Outdoor sports were abandoned and visitors for the most part sought the many clubs of the district where the latchstring was out with plenty of cheer inside.

The crowd that had lingered during the early morning hours, many of whom were all-night celebrators, scattered when the rain came down in earnest early in the afternoon and by 2:30, the time the parade was scheduled to start, the streets were practically deserted.

Company A of St. Vincent's Brigade of South Boston, headed by Captain John J. O'Brien, won the first prize of $100 at the prize drill at the Sullivan square playground.

CROWD WATCHES BOYS.

In spite of the rain, a large crowd visited the playground and watched the boys perform their evolutions.

The second prize of $75 was awarded Company A of St. Peter's Cadets, Dorchester, with Captain John Maguire in command.

Company D of the Sacred Heart Cadets, Captain Charles McCool, won the third prize of $50, and Company J of the Charlestown High School Cadets, Captain John J. Madden, the fourth prize of $25.

The judges were Lieutenant William McDade of the Eighth Regiment, Captain James T. Weir of the Fifth Infantry and Captain Herbert S. Laydon of the Ninth Regiment.

The "night before" proved one of the quietest in the history of Charlestown. The few arrests were due chiefly to a too liberal use of alcohol.

ALL LOOKING FORWARD.

At Sullivan square, the midway was well patronized during the evening, with a few lovers of this species of amusement lingering until daylight.

The people gathered for the most part on Main street all the way up to Sullivan square. In other sections of the city the crowd was normal and old-time residents had no difficulty in obtaining their full quota of sleep.

Residents of the district are now looking forward to July 4, when they hope the big, double celebration will be treated more kindly by the weather man.

LONDON SEES WAR FILMS BY I. N. S.

By International News Service.

London, June 17.—By far the most interesting collection of official war films ever seen in London was shown at the Scala Theatre under the auspices and supervision of the War Office.

A large and very distinguished audience, including Lord Derby, Sir William Robertson, chief of the imperial staff, Sir Reginald Brade, permanent secretary of the War Office, and many notable army officers, were present.

The utmost enthusiasm and appreciation were shown at the excellent pictures, many of which were taken by Ariel Varges, official British cinematographer with the British forces at Salonica and member of International Film Service staff.

Lord Derby introduced the pictures in a stirring address, announcing they will be shown twice daily in London and later throughout the country.

ROADS LOSE FIGHT ON FREIGHT CHARGE

Washington, June 17.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today ruled that railroads could not charge for hauling empty freight cars to a point to take on freight. The ruling was made in the case of the City Ice Delivery Company of Cleveland, Ohio, against the Pierre Marquette Railway resulting from the road charging $4 each for delivering empty cars at Rose Centre, which is located with ice for Cleveland.

"It can't be done," said the sceptics.

MARIAN LAMBERT'S MOTHER TELLS DAUGHTER'S HAPPINESS

By DOROTHY DIX.

Waukegan, Ill., June 17.—Thursday night was graduation night down at Deerfield High School in Highland Park, and if Marian Lambert had lived she would have been one of the best of pretty girls in white, carrying big bunches of white carnations, tied with bows of pearly white ribbon, who graduated.

Poor little Marian is dead, her life lessons finished, but her schoolmates are not forgetting her. They sent her mother the great bunch of fragrant carnations tied with the pretty bow of girlish ribbon that would have been here and then morning Mrs. Lambert took it to the cemetery and placed it on her daughter's grave.

CAME FROM MARIAN'S GRAVE.

From the cemetery Mrs. Lambert came on to Waukegan, where she had been summoned as a witness in the trial of William Orpet for the murder of her little girl, and she waited patiently in an ante-room almost all day before she was called to the witness stand.

Then she walked her head, and smiling her pitiable smile, went on with her story. She said that three girls had stayed all night with Marian on Saturday night, and on Sunday Marian had her birthday party when she had entertained sixteen of her schoolmates.

They were very gay, laughing, frolicking and joking, but just at parting Marian's eyes, and those of Anna Paulson, filled with tears. Anna, for the first time since they were little tots together, was not going to spend Marian's birthday night with her. That was all of the grieving. There was no hysterical weeping spell such as Josephine Davis had described Marian as having.

REMEMBERED PHONE CALL.

On Tuesday night Josephine Davis had stayed all night with Marian and they had washed the dishes after supper and played and sang a little and studied their lessons a little, and there had been a telephone call that Marian had answered but her mother had not asked her who called. Neither had she noticed any difference in Marian's face or manner when she came in from answering the telephone.

In speaking of the illness that Marian had on January 13, Mrs. Lambert testified that the evening before Marian had packed her dress-suit case, preparatory to going the next day to Lake Forest to spend a week end with Frances Bishop. In the night Mrs. Lambert was awakened by hearing Marian's loud breathing, and when she rushed into her room she found the girl unconscious and vomiting. She lifted her up and rubbed her limbs and restored consciousness while her husband telephoned to Dr. Parmenter.

"Did you know William Orpet?" asked Mr. Jeffris, and Mrs. Lambert replied:

"Yes."

"When did you see him last?"

"He was never at our house after the Friday evening after Thanksgiving," she replied.

IDENTIFIES LETTERS.

Mr. Jeffris then asked Mrs. Lambert to identify two or three letters in her daughter's handwriting, and that ended the State's examination.

She was not questioned as to whether she knew of Marian's intimacy with Orpet, or any of the causes which might possibly have led the girl to take her own life. The cross-examination of the defence was still briefer and more merciful; the mother of the dead girl was asked only the simple question:

"Did you ever read the bundle of letters written her by William Orpet that were found in Marian's desk after her death?"

Mrs. Lambert replied, "No," that she knew that Marian corresponded with Orpet. She had often seen her get letters, but had never read one of them.

WAR HISTORIAN FOR BRITAIN SELECTED

London, June 17.—John William Fortescue, librarian at Windsor Castle, has been appointed by the government to write the official story of the war.

WAR SUMMARY

Russian official statement, while claiming the capture of 14,000 more prisoners on the Galician front, with numerous successes west and southwest of Lutsk, indicates that the combined German and Austrian forces are giving the Slavs all they can handle in that portion of the front along the Strypa River. The Russian statement says that northwest of Buczacz the battle continues without cessation. The German official says that the Russians were repulsed and lost 400 men north of Przewloka, which is northwest of Buczacz. Evidently these statements refer to the same engagement.

The total number of prisoners claimed by Petrograd for the thirteen days so far of the Russian drive now reaches nearly 170,000.

No changes of importance are recorded from the Verdun front.

Rome declares that the Italian line holds firm along the entire front and that Austrian attacks in force (eighteen battalions) on the Asiago plateau, broke down, with heavy loss.

HINT THAT JOSEPHINE DAVIS WAS IN LOVE WITH WILL ORPET

any time that day take Marian aside or enter a room? A—No.

Q—Did you say anything about going anywhere? A—Yes, about going to the Christian Endeavor. We were going to have a basket ball game.

Q—Did you see anyone go aside with Marian and talk during the crying spell? A—No.

Mrs. Wells was then cross-examined by Attorney Potter.

Q—Did you know Marian intimately? A—Yes, sir, I did.

Q—How often did you see her the last two months of her life? A—I do not remember.

Q—Did she tell you all about her love affairs? A—I do not know exactly what you mean about love affairs. We were intimate friends. She did not tell me anything about any intimate relations with Will Orpet.

Q—Did she tell you she was in a delicate state as a result of her intimacy with Will Orpet? A—No.

Q—And you cannot tell me exactly when you saw her before the birthday party? A—No, but I remember seeing her at Anna Paulson's birthday party.

Q—Did you notice anything about her that would lead you to think that she was light hearted and gay because she was harboring a secret trouble? A—No, but she always appeared light hearted and gay—was always laughing and giggling any saying things that made the fun go jingle.

ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

Q—Did you spend all your time at the party in one room? A—No, we were all over the house.

Q—Who else was with you and Marian in the kitchen? A—I do not remember. I was not alone with Marian at any time during the party.

Q—You were all laughing and playing together? A—Yes.

Q—Do you know of any arrangements for the girls to spend the night? A—We were all asked to stay. I left before six. I know two girls from Libertyville had been staying with Marian, but know nothing of them staying with her that night.

Miss Wells was then excused and Florence Russell, also of Lake Forest, another of the "Eighteen Bunch," was called.

Q—Did you go to Deerfield school with Marian? A—Yes; I have just graduated. Marian was in my class.

Q—Were you at the birthday party at Marian's? A—Yes.

Q—And you all had tears? A—Yes; Anna Paulson cried and Marian cried a little.

Q—What was the crying about? A—Anna was just sorry she could not stay with Marian. Objection was sustained as answer was considered a conclusion.) The girl then testified to a conversation that seemed to show the girls cried.

Q—What did you and Marian talk about? A—We talked about going away to college.

Q—Did you see any other tears that day? A—No.

Q—Did you see "Jo" Davis take Marian aside? A—No.

Q—How often during the last three months of her life did you see Marian? A—Every day at school.

ALWAYS SEEMED HAPPY.

Q—Did she always appear happy or unhappy? A—I never saw her once during that time that she did not appear happy, jolly and laughing.

Q—Were you on intimate terms with Marian? asked Potter of Miss Russell on cross-examination. A—Yes, we were good friends. I knew her as a good girl friend.

Q—Did you exchange school girl secrets? A—Just that one night that I stayed with her before the birthday party.

The Russell girl's story on cross-examination corroborated that given by the Wells girl. Attorney Potter earnestly sought, in cross-questioning the school girls to show that though they were all admittedly intimate friends of Marian Lambert, no one of them was as close to the dead girl as Josephine Davis.

The Russell girl denied that she knew of any intimate relations that might have existed between Will Orpet and Marian and denied that Marian had ever told her she was in trouble because of these relations.

Q.—Did Marian tell you anything about she having heard that Will was engaged to Celeste Yonker? asked Potter. A.—Yes, she told me she had heard he was engaged to Miss Yonker, that she wanted to find out about it. She said if she found it to be true she did not know what she would do.

Q—Do you remember what Marian told you about what "Jo" Davis told you about Will Orpet? A—Yes; she said that "Jo" Davis liked Orpet herself, and that she (Marian) was aware of the fact.

Q—Now, Miss Russell, rather you search your memory and remember anything else that Marian said about Will's and Celeste's engagement? A.—No (after a long hesitation).

Attorney Dady for the State asked no redirect.

Q—What did she say about Orpet's having slept in the garage one night? A—She said he had something on the chauffeur at Lake Forest and that on a trip there (to Lake Forest) to visit her he had slept in the garage without his parents knowing anything about it.

Q—What did Marian tell you about her parents' opinion of Will Orpet? A—She said they had forbidden him coming to see her.

Q—What else did she tell you about Orpet personally. A—She said Orpet had a very good time one night and that she hoped it would grow better.

Q—What else did Marian tell you about "Jo" Davis? A.—She said she had an idea that "Jo" Davis came to her home much in hopes of seeing Will there. She said she did not care if "Jo" Davis did like Orpet.

Miss Minnie Hoffman, Marian's Sunday school teacher, then took the stand.

Q—Did you know Marian Lambert? asked Mr. Dady. A—Yes, answered Miss Hoffman.

Q—Was she at Sunday school the Sunday before she died? A—Yes.

Q—Did she appear happy or unhappy then? A—Happy.

Q—Did she always appear happy whenever you saw her? A—Yes.

Frances Bishop, a very pretty, timid appearing school girl, was next questioned on the witness stand.

She presented a very pretty appearance. She wore a small white and red turban and a bright red scarf thrown over her shoulders. She answered questions in a clearer voice than the other girls.

Q—How long have you known Marian Lambert? A—This year and last. I saw her only at school.

WAS AT BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Q—Did you visit her home? A—Yes sir, I was at her birthday party.

Q—See any tears at Marian's birthday party? A—Yes, I saw Anna Paulson and Marian crying when Anna was leaving.

Q—What was said? A—Marian said she was crying because Anna was leaving.

Q—What was said? A—Marian said she was crying because Anna was leaving.

Q—Did you see Marian cry at any other time? A—Yes.

Q—Where did you stay that night? A—At Marian's. I went to school with her the next Monday and saw her in school Tuesday.

Q—Describe Marian's appearance as to happiness or unhappiness whenever you saw her during the last three months of her life? A—I never saw Marian when she wasn't happy.

Q—Did you see "Jo" Davis take her aside at the party? A—No.

Q—(By Potter)—But you don't know where "Jo" or Marian was every minute of the party, do you? A—No, not every minute of it.

Mary Marshall, daughter of William Marshall, golf instructor at the Onwentsia Club, was the next witness.

Q—How often did you see Marian during the last year of her life? A—I saw her almost daily. I went to school with her. (The Marshall girl was also one of the party of eighteen school girls that celebrated Marian's birthday.

Q—During the last three months of Marian's life did she always appear happy or unhappy? A—She always appeared happy.

Miss Marshall corroborated the testimony of the other girls as to Marian and Anna Paulson crying at the party because, according to the story of Anna, could not be all night with her.

"When Marian cried I took her into the bedroom and comforted her," said the Marshall girl, and I guess I cried too. Then I walked home all night with Marian. I did not see 'Jo' Davis take Marian aside during the party."

Q—Was Marian a very good friend of yours? (Mr. Potter asked on cross-examination.) A—I considered her my best friend (Here she broke into tears).

Q.—Did she tell you of any secret meeting she had with Will Orpet? A.—Yes, she told me that Will Orpet secretly came to her home after school a week after school opened and that he had been able to stay secretly on his father's place, as he was somebody there for whom he had done a favor once and to whom he was now returning.

Q—Did she tell you about Will's reported engagement? A—Yes, sir, she said she had heard of it and that she was going to see him about it.

HAPPY UP TO LAST DAY.

Q—And you never saw her when she was not happy? A—No, except on the last day, when Anna Paulsch could not stay with her.

Q—Now what else did she tell you about Will? A—She said she did not care anything more about him after she heard he was engaged to Miss Yonker and did not want to have anything more to do with him. She also said he was coming down on Wednesday and that she wanted to know how she could get out of serving at the luncheon so she could meet him.

FRENCH PIERCE TRENCHES OF GERMANS

By International News Service.

London, June 17.—The battle on the Verdun front is raging with all its former vigor, the official French communique stated today.

In the Vosges, the French, by a series of strong attacks, penetrated the first and second lines of German trenches at Hill No. 425.

German troops delivered attacks with hand grenades against the French position in Avocourt forest and at Hill No. 304 west of the Meuse River, but were repulsed.

At Le Mort Homme (Dead Man Hill) and Fleury the German artillery is shelling the French positions with extreme violence.

The text of the French official communique follows:

"In Belgium, rather violent artillery duels occurred during the night in the sector of Boesinghe-Langemarck.

"On the left bank of the Meuse the Germans attacked our positions of the Avocourt redoubt, and our advanced posts west of Hill No. 304.

"These attacks were easily repulsed. There has been an intense bombardment of our positions of Le Mort Homme, but without infantry activity.

"On the right bank of the Meuse violent artillery conflict occurred in the sector north of Fleury.

"In the Vosges, following a violent bombardment by our artillery of the German earthworks on Hill No. 425, east of Thann, a detachment of our infantry penetrated the first and second lines of the Germans, who were overwhelmed. Our detachment returned to our lines without losses and bringing prisoners.

"At the end of the day several bombards dropped by German aviators at Pont-a-Mousson did no damage to our works.

"During the night of June 14-15 one of our air squadrons bombarded Longuion, Montmedy and Audun-le-Roman, dropping thirty-three shells of large calibre."

Berlin Reports Big Battle on 2 Fronts

Berlin, June 17.—Only artillery duelling was reported on the Verdun front today by the German War Office. It was stated, however, that the big guns were very active on both sides of the river. On the East front there is very violent fighting. At Stodwi, on the Strypa River, General von Linsengen's army is engaged with the Russians.

North of Przeloka the forces under General von Bothmer are at grips with the Muscovite forces. The text of the official German report follows:

"West front—A patrol attack at Beaulne, north of the Aisne, was repulsed by the Germans.

"In the Meuse district the artillery activity has increased to great violence.

"At points in the Vosges we inflicted losses upon the enemy by the execution of mines northeast of Celles.

"West of Senneheim we repulsed a detachment of the enemy that had temporarily penetrated our trenches.

"East front—The army of General von Linsengen is engaged with the Russians at Stochod on the River Styr.

"North of Przeloka parts of the army of General von Bothmer is at grips with the enemy.

"Balkan front—Renewed successful aerial attacks there is nothing to report.

"Aviation—The airmen are very active on both sides. We have bombarded military installations in Bergues, Bar le Duc, Dombasle, Etain-ville, Juneville and Blainville."

RECOVER AUTOS; THIEVES ESCAPE

Two stolen automobiles were recovered in Stoneham and Medford today, but the thieves escaped. A five-passenger touring car, the property of Godfrey Mollolini, No. 85 Meridian street, Melrose, was stolen from in front of Cubberly's Dancing Academy in Lakeside. It was found early today on the State Road between Stoneham and Reading.

A light motorbike owned by Henry W. Hough of No. 256 Harvard street, Cambridge, was stolen from in front of the Elks' Home, Cambridge. Early today it was seen passing through Medford square with five young men passengers. A policeman in a motor car pursued the machine, and eventually found it abandoned on the outskirts of the city.

BULGARS MASS ON RUMANIAN BORDER

Paris, June 17.—A report is received from Athens that the Bulgarians are withdrawing the majority of their forces from the Salonica front to the Rumanian frontier.

The explanation advanced is the possible effect of the Russian drive in Austria upon Rumania, which has stayed out of the war thus far, although assiduously courted by both sides.

On the Salonica front the Bulgarians are fortifying feverishly in the region of Fort Rupel almost penetrating any further into Greek territory.

Austrians Press Italians Despite Russian Drive

Rome, June 17.—Tremendous efforts made by masses of Austro-Hungarian troops, about 18,000 in number, to break through the Italian centre on the Asiago plateau failed completely, according to the War Office report made public here. The Austrians left great piles of dead upon the field.

Similar attacks, hardly less violent in character, although on a smaller scale, at various points along the Italian front, were equally fruitless.

Officer in British Army Indicted as Recruiter in U. S.

Seattle, Wash., June 17.—The Federal Grand Jury today indicted Captain H. J. Thompson of the British army for alleged violation of the neutrality laws by asking to recruit men in Seattle for the American Legion for service abroad with the Canadian troops.

In default of $2,000 bail he was taken to jail.

CZAR'S TROOPS CONTINUE TO ADVANCE

Petrograd, June 17. — Although Austro-Hungarian resistance has been stiffened in Galicia by the arrival of reinforcements of German, the Russians continue to make progress all along the line. The number of prisoners in the hands of the Russians is daily increased by great batches of captives, while the booty is of such enormous quantities that the Teutons have begun to feel its loss keenly.

The number of prisoners is now said to be about 170,000, although some of the reports say 200,000.

Along the Strypa in mid-Galicia bridgehead positions of the Austro-Germans are under heavy fire. Further to the south in the Bukowina sector infantry action of ferocious intensity are under way. Dispatches from the front dwell upon the increasing violence of the artillery duelling along the Dvina River, where the armies of Field Marshal von Hindenburg are facing the Russians.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS ON THE BOSTON AMERICAN

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were weak in New York at the close after a dull day. Near the close Atlantic & Ohio and Louisville & Nashville improved. So did Tennessee Copper and American Beet Sugar. United Fruit was strong, but not particularly active. After opening weak it rallied and closed with a 2½ gain.

Closing declines included Anaconda ⅜, Chino ⅜, Kennecott ¼, Miami ⅛, Utah Copper ½, American Can ⅜, Car & Foundry ⅝, American Locomotive ½, U. S. Smelting ⅜, American Smelting 1⅛, American Zinc ⅛, Butte & Superior ⅝, Baldwin 1, Colorado Fuel ⅝, Crucible ⅞, General Electric 1½, Goodrich 1, Great Northern Ore ⅝, Mexican Petroleum 1⅝, Maxwell ½, Studebaker 1⅛, Willys-Overland 2⅛, N. Y. Air Brake 3½, Republic Steel ⅝, Texas Co. 5, U. S. Steel ½, Industrial Alcohol ⅜, Westinghouse ⅝, Atchison ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ⅝, Canadian Pacific ⅝, Erie ½, Lehigh Valley ½, N. Y. Central ⅝, Illinois Central 1¼, Norfolk & Western ¼, New Haven ⅝, Northern Pacific ⅛, Reading ⅝, Southern Pacific ½, St. Paul ⅝ and Union Pacific ½.

Among gains were United Fruit 2⅛, American Beet Sugar ⅜, Marine preferred ½, Tennessee Copper 1⅛, Chesapeake & Ohio ½ and Rock Island ⅛.

Chandler recovered its loss and closed unchanged, as did Inspiration.

The New York bank statement as to actual condition of clearing house members shows that surplus reserve increased $21,464,440, while the average condition increase was $21,554,540.

On the New York Metal Exchange Copper was quiet but firm. August 23¾ to 24, September 23⅝ to 23¾, October 23½, November and December 23. Quotations for next year are nominal at 18¾ for January, 23¾ for February, 23¾ for March and 23 for April. Spelter was weak, prime Western brand spot shipments 12¼, July 11, August 11½.

N. Y. MARKET OPENED WEAK.

Prices ruled lower in New York at the opening and they grew weaker at once. Railroads and coppers were the most active groups. Alaska Gold was soon more than a point below yesterday's closing price. Studebaker opened a point off. Chandler was the most active motor car issue and was weak. Mexican Petroleum was active and receded. Reading, Erie and Union Pacific were the most prominent railroads around the start. All sought a lower level. Inspiration was an exception to most stocks in being strong. It was the most active of the coppers. American Beet Sugar was also much in evidence and advanced. Commission house attendance was small, and at the exchange trading was listless. The downward trend of the market was attributed to warlike reports from Mexico and to fear that there is going to be serious troubles between railroads and their employes. Added to this was uncertainty as to the presidential campaign. The effect of these continued bad features upon crops is also being considered.

Today's was not a legal holiday Boston exchanges were closed.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

H. K. Dean, treasurer, has wired Albert Sutcliffe & Co. of No. 60 State street, regarding the Gold Cup Mines at Central City, Colorado. "Shaft is producing richer ore than ever. Vein started on mother lode. Vein sinking deeper. Bonanza with more depth. Shipping ore last week more than $60 a ton."

Increasing profits for the fiscal year now drawing to a close approximate $20 a share. Directors are due to take dividend action next week.

It is predicted that for 1916 Anaconda net profits will amount to as much as $45,000,000.

Illinois Central earnings this year are likely to show about 10 per cent on outstanding stock.

The issue of $5,000,000 Kansas City Railways Company first mortgage 5 per cent bonds, offered by Kean, Taylor & Co., have all been sold.

Hughes Is No-Hit Hero Whiffs Honus as Finale

There was no ball game at Braves' Field this morning. The heavy rain made play impossible. It was said at Braves' headquarters that this afternoon's game would be played if conditions were right.

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

Not so many years back Thomas Altitude Hughes of Solida, Col., then hurling for the Yankees, went into the ninth inning with two men out and his opposing club hitless. Then followed a succession of base knocks which fractured an otherwise perfect afternoon.

Undaunted, Long Tom went at the matter once more, about three months later, and entered the ninth inning under similar conditions. Then followed three knocks which snatched victory for him as well as unending fame.

Yesterday Hughes accomplished his one desire—to hit a game. These hard hurling Pirates, John Peter Wagner, Phil Honus and Max Carey, Mr. Johnston and in fact all of them senators were turned down hitless throughout the resultless pitching assignment.

Hughes is the fifth Boston National hoseman to accomplish the feat. Strivetts, Willis, Pfeffer and Davis, the last named Hughes' teammate, are the others owning no-hit games.

Smoothly the time honored burled his arm through the contest. In the ninth, with the top of the Pittsburgh batting order up, and a no-hit game within sight, he tightened and turned them back.

Thus did the Braves fracture the jinx which has stared them in the face throughout the portion of the season now decadent. They took their first game of the year from the Pirates in most emphatic manner. The two runs they garnered were sufficient to lend them safely in front and, glory be, remained throughout.

Wonderful pitching with almost perfect support, gave them the classiest win Boston baldom has witnessed since that early day in 1914 when George Davis set the Phillies down a mere handful.

TO OBSERVE HOLIDAY.

The Braves today, however, it behooves me to pay attention in part to the happenings of this morning, as I am not Charles Patrick Dagan will start to project his slants across the paper with the avowed view of emulating the work of Long Tom. Opposing him, in all probability, will be Carl Mays, the submarine of some ability.

Should Callahan fail to send Cooper out against our hustlers, the chances strongly favor Frank Miller, the right handed portsider hailing for Charles Comiskey.

Callahan, in refusing to repeat against the Braves yesterday was loving Kantleiner a southpaw who hurled three hours against the successful against the former champs. He stood a gaff for seven frames and didn't get credit for the second and executive friend, Bob Harmon, Wagner was the first Pirate to see a base and that view came by virtue of his liberal period of free hours. So he must come a blow and likewise.

KLEM MUSSES MATTERS.

Bill Klem, Solem, in his official capacity called a ball on Wagner. That was there to form, as has been his wanton from time to time this season, but he got himself into more or less difficulty with players and fans alike. Bill pulled one in the sixth so correctly right, but according to all laws of average, S. Nathaniel Klem and other party to the happening, was equally as culpable as was Bill.

With two gone, Magee reached the first stop by virtue of a single, and, with Kopf still on, attempted to steal. As he started Koney swung on the pitch and the best was a foul tip. Magee was put out. Level of the second stop, when he heard Klem call "foul," and, in perfect bean Honus Wagner was waiting for him with the pellet. Fisher's throw completed the double out.

Straightforth then came a screetch from Magee and likewise a series of screeches from the 30,000 fruitful on hand. The umpire, however, was unavailing, hoarse, so Magee was out and legally so. Four innings may have been a long time to wait for Klem to make a strike on Magee, but Behold! one was delivered when Magee erred and he fell.

Crack Field to Star in Grind at Revere

TONIGHT'S BICYCLE CARD.

Twenty-five-mile motor paced race —Starters: Clarence Carman, Jamaica, L. I.; Paul Suter, Switzerland; George Columbatto, Italy, and Pinky Turville, Revere.

Professional pursuit race—Teams: Pat Logan and Tim Sullivan vs. L. C. Rollins and Ned Chandler.

Professional and amateur open and handicap events.

Starting time—5:15 p. m.

There will be new faces at the Revere Beach Oval tonight for the twenty-five mile motor-paced race when "Pinky" Turville, the Revere flyer; George Columbatto of Italy; Clarence Carman of Jamaica, L. I., and Paul Suter of Switzerland start in the event.

While it will be Suter's initial appearance at the track, he comes with a great reputation and strong backing. Columbatto rode here but once last year. This will be Turville's second appearance behind the motors, and with Carman as the fourth starter, a speedy race should result.

The semi-final event, the pursuit race, will contain two of the older professionals at the track against two of the youngsters. Pat Logan and Tim Sullivan, who made such a big hit at the indoor six-day race last Winter, will ride against Ned Chandler, the speedy ex-pro youth, who recently turned professional, and L. C. Rollins of Everett.

There will be the regular card of amateur and professional events.

The one-hour motor paced race, scheduled for last night, was called off on account of the slippery condition of the track and will be run off this afternoon at 2:45 o'clock.

RUTH OUT TO STEM TIDE

Manager Carrigan Rests Hopes with Husky Pinch-Hitter in the Rubber Tilt with Chicago.

Chicago, June 17.—The Red Sox and the White Sox now stand solid on the current series because three of Carrigan's carefully selected twirlers mussed things up yesterday. The game, won by Chicago, was the day before's turned around and ended in a 7-4 score.

Chicago had all the luck, whereas Boston had none in the previous affair. Otherwise, the teams might be playing yet.

Just to show how things happen in baseball, Manager Rowland of the Chicago outfit elected to send in a pinch-hitter for Pitcher Williams. His regular lieutenant showed him off, as he allowed Williams to bat for himself. In the next round paid Williams was blown off the mound by Carrigan's toilers.

PLENTY OF PITCHERS.

As if this were not sufficient, Wolfgang, who succeeded Williams, was hailed out in the seventh in favor of Fournier, who displayed no class at bat.

The Red Sox nicked Jim Scott for a run in the eighth, but the White Sox slightly outdid George Foster for a trio of hits, a bit by pitched ball and a few other things. Then, when Jones horned in, he had the misfortune to commit a wild pitch just as a double steal started, advancing both men for where they started and putting a Chicago runner on third instead of second.

The game was one of those wild and woppy affairs, which, from a technical standpoint, is bad, but the home club won, and, according to the best writers, no game is bad if the natives cop.

Even in defeat the Red Sox looked good. They simply did not have the pitching, and without that valuable adjunct no ball team can very far.

No doubt Vean Gregg was employed on the theory that any left-hander can have the pinkie hose. He failed to astound to any remarkable degree. Foster was wild and ineffective and Jones had the misfortune to commit a wild pitch in a pinch.

RUTH DOWN TO HURL.

It is expected that "Babe" Ruth will hurl today and that he will be opposed by Reed or Danforth. Manager Carrigan still clings to the idea that the White Sox will offer the chief opposition on or about the ides of October.

Yesterday Eddie Collins, whose batting average has showed a piece of raw liver in an olive hole, came through with a single, a double and a triple. His lack of hitting has been the chief reason why the Chicago ex-ace has not progressed better in the race.

NAME DATES FOR BIG TENNIS CLASH

New York, June 17.—The dates for tennis matches between teams representing the Pacific and Atlantic coasts have been named by officials of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association.

The series of five singles and two doubles will be played on the turf of the Forest Hills Club, in this city, New York, on Friday and Saturday, August 4 and 5. The Pacific coast team will be selected from M. E. Long, R. N. Williams, Jr., Davis and Roland Roberts. The Atlantic coast team will be named following the Longwood (Boston) tournament.

DONOVAN SHAKES UP YANKS' ORDER

Cleveland, June 17.—Three defeats at Detroit and the loss of Thursday's game here, so incensed Manager Donovan of the New York Yankees that he has shaken up his batting order. Gilhooley will continue to lead off, but is followed by High, Peckinpaugh and Pipp, in order. Baker, batting been shoved back from fourth to fifth position and Magee and Gleason dropped from second and third to sixth and seventh, respectively. Donovan is still under suspension.

JOHNSON-GARDNER PLAY AT LONGWOOD

At 10 a. m. today Harry C. Johnson and G. P. Gardner, Jr., the title holder, clash in the challenge round in the State singles championship tournament at Longwood. Johnson vanquished George C. Caner, captain-elect of the Harvard team, in the finals, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4.

YALE CALLING ON BROWN

Providence, June 17.—The Brown University nine is in trim for his battle here today with Yale. If it elects up a great record is bound to make the contest between the two crack college teams.

B. L. ELECTS McGUIRE.

Fred McGuire, Boston Latin's crack second baseman, has been elected captain of next year's team.

DAVIS TO DIRECT BATES.

Lewiston, Me., June 17.—Sumner Davis of South Paris has been elected captain of the 1916 Bates College nine.

HARRY SALLEE SET DOWN BY HUGGINS

New York, June 17.—Harry Sallee of the St. Louis Cardinals has been indefinitely suspended by Manager Huggins as the result of an altercation between the manager and the player late Thursday night.

Sallee tore up his contract during the argument, Huggins said, and left the city.

"Sallee has been disgruntled and dissatisfied for some time," stated Huggins. "He had not broken training, however. There is no deal on in which Sallee is involved, and he will not be sold or traded to any club."

YACHTS IN BIG TILT

Boston Club Gives Its First Open Regatta of Season Over Hull Bay Inside Course.

All the active yachtsmen and the lovers of the yacht racing sport were at Hull this morning, when the Boston Yacht Club gave its first open regatta of the season. E. W. Dutton, chairman of the Boston Yacht Club racing committee, had everything in readiness for today's races and expected more than a hundred boats would participate.

As the North Shore championship, which were scheduled to take place last Saturday off Marblehead, under the auspices of the Corinthian Yacht Club, were entirely unsatisfactory because of the wretched weather conditions, today's races afforded the following of the sport another first opportunity to see the "P" boats in action.

"P" BOATS IN ACTION.

The "P" boats have made two starts this season, May 30, at the South Boston Yacht Club's races and last Saturday, but as there were but three starters in the Memorial Day race and only two last Saturday, the class has not really been seen in action.

Even at this early date many of the "deposters" are picking the Ahmeek, the former Canadian sloop, which is now owned and sailed by Charles Francis Adams, to win the Lipton cup, but this newcomer will have its hands full capturing high honors in the class against such boats as the Nutmeg III., the 1915 winner, the Wanska II., which won the Manhasset Bay cup last Summer; the Sayonara II., the runner-up for the Lipton cup; the Dalia, the Stranger and the Bernice.

All these boats were scheduled to go to the starting mark this morning and give battle to the Ahmeek. This was the first race of the season for the Bar Harbor class, and Skipper "Joe" Santry of the Flight was out for championship, and said as was the case last Summer, Captain Santry will have to battle through the Summer with Guy Moses' Mildred.

Every member of the Squantum Yacht Club is ready to wager that the Areyto will come home with the T. R. U. of Massachusetts championship in the A Class. The Areyto took a first at the South Boston Yacht Club open regatta, May 30, and as the skipper carried an entirely new set of sails today they looked for another win.

RACE OVER NEW COURSE.

As the tide was high at noon, the races were started at 10:40, the first warning gun being fired twenty minutes earlier. The "P" boats were sent away at 10:40, and the remainder of the classes started in the following order, at three-minute intervals: Bar Harbor, 31-footers; Class E, Y. R. U.; Boston Yacht Club, First Special Rating Class; Boston Yacht Club, Second Rating Class; Class K, Y. R. U. scnders; Class R, 25-footers; Class A, Y. R. U.; Class B, Y. R. U.; Class D, 15-foot knockabouts; Class D, cathoats; Hingham and Winthrop one-design 15-footers, and Class N, dories.

Although in the past the annual 17th of June races of the Boston Yacht Club has been held over the outside course, which is a triangular one from Boston Light to the Boston Lightship, to a mark off Cohasset, the race this morning was sailed over the Hull Bay inside course.

Many of the skippers of the big boats failed to receive the news of this change with glee, as racing around the islands in Hull Bay is a thing being sent liable to get some of the crafts into serious trouble on account of the shallow water.

If the yachtsmen are favored with a fresh breeze they will get all the racing they want, for Hull Bay is famous for its "off sou'westers" on the other hand if the wind is light there is danger of the races being called off, as the boats will have trouble finishing inside the time limit.

JOE CONNOLLY HAS SNAP WITH BRUSSO

For the second week running there was a switch in principals in the team box at the Commercial A. C. Eddie Flynn of Peabody failed to keep his engagement with Joe Connolly of Charlestown and Young Brusso of Revere was forced to work as a substitute. Brusso managed to stick until the fifth round, when a right swing sent him down for the full count. Johnny Mack was very wild and lost on a foul to Joe Farren in the second round.

The bout which pleased the most was the eight-rounder between Jimmy Kenny of Woburn and Harry Ah Chung of Salem. The Chinaman flashed in spots, but Kenny's work was the cleaner and he gained the verdict. Tony Vatlan won from "Red" Kelly in the curtain-raiser.

Harvard Giving Odds Out to Take Odd Event

Gales Ferry, Ct., June 17.—More varieties of wagers are being laid by Yale and Harvard men this year than ever before on the outcome of their annual regatta, which takes place next Friday.

Despite the fact that Harvard has nothing to show for last season's races, in which Yale swept the river clean, Harvard men are ready with odds that its crew will snatch the varsity eight-oared race. Another favorite bet of the Crimson "rooters" is that their crews will win two of the three races.

Yale is giving odds on the freshman race and Harvard is offering odds on the outcome of the second varsity eight-oared event.

The return to the second varsity eight of H. S. Middendorf has made that fast Harvard crew the most dangerous two-mile rowing combination on the river. Middendorf was given seat No. 6 in the reserve shell because it is not thought that he can sufficiently recover from his recent attack of la grippe to be trusted to row such a bruising four-mile race as he will be put up to Harvard next Friday.

It is feared that Middendorf's weakened condition might show in the last mile.

Aside from this possibility, "Mose" Taylor and C. A. White have done remarkably well since they were installed at Nos. 6 and No. 4, respectively, in the Harvard first eight.

It is not believed that Harvard will attempt to cover the four miles under the watch tonight. However, Yale will probably make the attempt. There will be no possibility that a new record will be created, for the trial will have to be up stream.

YALE TIME VERY SLOW.

Guy Nickalls would like to see his first eight crew show better form every the four miles than it exhibited when it covered the distance in 20 minutes 46 seconds a week ago, that fastest mark since time rowing began here.

Nickalls will not decide whether to order his last possible time row till he sizes up the river conditions late this afternoon. Yale's quarters were today filling up fast with a lot of alumni, who are enroute to New Haven for the commencement sport which begins tomorrow. General William W. Skiddy of New York, Al Swayne and "Trek" Campbell of the Graduate Rowing Committee, Harry Payne Whitney, in his yacht "Whitaway," and Colonel L. C. F. Robinson of Hartford, in his boat, "Savarona," will remain over Sunday.

O. K. DESPITE WEATHER.

Yale alumni will come to the Harvard camp till after commencement, next Wednesday.

Despite the depressing weather, the general health of the oarsmen in both camps has remained up top, the single slight illness of Middendorf of Harvard and Captain Page of the Yale freshman eight being the only exceptions.

The weights of the Yale oarsmen have continued to climb and they average about two pounds to the man heavier than when they came here. Coach Nickalls gave the oarsmen, during their stay on the Housatonic River, a record of twenty-seven miles one day.

The biggest total ordered since the Eli coach reached here has been thirteen miles. It is likely that the conditioning, rowing which will be left after the close of time rowing tonight, will be longer in the daily total than most previous Yale crews have received.

PHILBRICK TAKES GAME.

Bob Philbrick won last night's baseline game at the Oakley Club, Newton, from Harry Adams, 125-120. A run of seven by the winner was high.

Amherst Teams Hard Hit by Graduation

Amherst, June 17.—Amherst athletics will be hard hit as a result of the graduation of the class of 1916 next week. The class contains an unusually large proportion of men who are first-class players in many branches of sport, and their loss leave doubts as to the results of next year's teams.

Football is the sport in which the loss will be felt most keenly. Captain Rider graduates after three years as a backfield star. Gaps will be left in the line by the loss of Ashley and Knowlton, the two tackles, and the heaviest men on the team. The pair were largely responsible for the Amherst victory over William last Fall. Goodridge, end for two years, will leave this June, as well as Tow and Washburn, who have guided the team from the position of quarterback for three seasons.

Baseball will not lose many men, but in Captain Goodridge, Amherst will be deprived of her only first class pitcher, and the chief effort next year will be to develop moundsmen to fill his shoes. The only other losses to this team will be those of Ashley, an outfielder, and Seamans, second string pitcher.

The track team will lose Captain Heavens in the distance and Knowlton in the weights. Here, however, the loss will not be felt so greatly, as it is expected that Hunter, a star man in the field events and the hurdles, will become eligible next Fall and make up in himself any losses caused by graduation. The minor teams will not be affected so greatly, and basketball, tennis and swimming it is expected, will be stronger next year than this.

MOGRIDGE GOES TO BON ESETTER

Cleveland, June 17.—George Mogridge, one of the Yankees' left-handers, was sent to Youngstown to see Bone Setter Reese. His arm has never fully recovered since he hurt it a month ago. He may be out of the game for some time.

I. A. A. C. TO LOSE ROBBIE.

Philadelphia, Penn., June 17.—Lawson Robertson has made arrangements to resign as coach of the Irish-American A. C. of New oYrk, and begin his duties at the University of Pennsylvania as the track and field coach in the Fall.

THE CYNIC.

There once was a time
When I abandoned at crime.
And my hair stood up under my hat.
It gave me a pain
When a preacher was slain,
But the war dope has cured me of that.

I was horrified once
By their horrible stunts
And my bosom would shiver and shrink,
Not a wrinkle would now
Wreathe my lovian brow
If Tom Jones were to purchase a drink.

Catastrophes now
Never wrinkle my brow,
Nor cause me a pang of distress,
And I don't even heed
When a headline I read:
"Janowski Beats Marshall at Chess."

Fielder Jones is consistent. He couldn't use Cleveland at the opening of the season. They are so far behind now that he can't see 'em with a telescope.

One thing we liked about the Democratic convention is that it was not held in Boston.

There is one thing our infinitesimal brain cannot comprehend. Why was the Democratic convention?

There was not a discordant note in the gathering at St. Louis. All was harmony. The refrain was somewhat as follows: "Sit down or I'll knock you down!"

Dave Robertson, we read, doesn't like a southpaw. Possibly that is why he murders 'em.

MODERN MAUD.

Maud Muller, on a Summer day,
Was snoring calmly in the hay.
She had been at a cabaret.

YOUTH.

Youth will have its fling, according to a guy who once wrote poetry. Some poets write more truth than poetry. Most of them don't write either. But that is aside from the question which we are about to discuss.

Youth, as all men know, begins at an early age and some of peters out like a punctured tire as the years pass by.

That is the ordinary youth. However, there are exceptions. Some men are old women in their infancy, while others are chicken at the age of threescore and ten. Some men are dead three generations before they are born, but they refuse to believe it. That is one of the principal faults of the human race.

Ponce de Leon once led an expedition into Florida in search of the Fountain of Youth. All he found was a flock of mosquitoes. Ponce didn't realize at the time how lucky he was. If he were to make the trip to modern times he would have found a flock of newly hatched millionaires, which, as all men know, are more cantiferous than any other form of insect.

We were speaking, however, of youth. Enthusiasm (or whatever his name was) was young at the age of 865 years (or whatever it was). All he ever did in his life was to live, but you have to hand it to him. He sure did live.

But the subject or object of our remarks bodies and seats, is to call your attention to the aldest youth and the youngest old man in baseball. I take great pleasure in introducing SHERWOOD MAGEE!

We are told that a man acquires manifold, only once in a one way smallpox differs from the vice presidency.

DILLON SAYS HE WILL WHIP MORAN

New York, June 17.—Jack Dillon has started training for his contest on June 23, with Frank Moran. Dillon is in fine spirits, and predicts all sorts of disaster for Moran and his supporters.

Ted Lewis Sails Away for Bouts in Buenos Ayres

By International News Service.

New York, June 17. — When the Vasazie sailed for Buenos Ayres today there was aboard another contingent of American boxers supplementing the stir who sailed two weeks ago to take part in the boxing carnival in the Argentine metropolis during July and August.

Billy Gibson, American representative of the Argentine promoter, who had been planning to make the trip and personally direct the trip, was compelled to give up his plans and will not go.

Joe Jeannette, the big colored heavyweight, is the only one of the boxers signed originally who will not make the journey.

The party includes Alfred Badeaud, Ted Lewis, Charles Johnston, brother of Jamey Johnston, who will manage Lewis on behalf of his brother; Bert Murphy, who will accompany Badeaud for Jim McKetrick; James Buckley, Joe Woodman and George Lawrence, respective managers of Harry Wills, Sam Langford and Sam McVey, Mike Mazie and Alexander Goodman, Lewis' trainers.

RING REMARKS

Eddie Mack's many friends will be glad to learn that the well-known little sportsman, winner of so many events in sport at Braves Field Monday afternoon a week ago, was strong enough to leave the City Hospital yesterday. Of course, he had a close call. Who wouldn't, with a piece of lead piercing one's right thigh and passing clear through to the left member, not to mention being "scratched" on the right ankle? At that, Mack is practically little the worse for the excitement. He'll be back, if any, weight, while his vocabulary was absolutely unimpaired.

Next week's card at the Commercial A. C.: Dave Powers vs. "Tank" O'Brien, ten rounds; Jimmy Vates vs. Vates, ten rounds; Johnny Emery vs. Dan McCormack, six rounds, and "Chick" Howard vs. Jimmy Farris, six rounds. Needless to say the program is subject to change.

George Freeman, Mike Glover's manager, states that the latter's recent underweight wasn't kidding when he gave it out, after his bout with Ted (Kid) Lewis at Braves Field Tuesday night, he had gone to the post for the last time. "Glover is through; there's no doubt about it," states Freeman. "Nobody knows what a fight he has fought and how hard he had to work to build himself up. The only reason I let him go on was I should show he is nowhere near his former self."

Charley Deshler, brother of Dave Deshler, the ring and stage fiend, has attracted greatly the past nine months to put Mike Deshler, the Revere miller, over big in pugdom. Up to the Fall of '15 no one Deshler was showing in the semi-finals at the Arena and now, as a result, a Butler-Mack bout never amounts to a whole lot.

Butler went on at the Commercial A. C. a few weeks ago. His foe was George Alger, and what Butler did to the latter was but little short of a sin and a shame. Alger was another who knew under Abe Attell's management that night. Remember, six months ago Butler and Alger were good right together, but at the C. A. C. the former proved his complete superiority over his old rival.

Now Butler draws another window date and is to step with Gilbert Gallant, the rugged Chelsea lightweight, at Arena next Saturday night. This time a year ago Gallant was fresh with the stars of the game, while Butler was considered a raw rookie. The latter's pal Mish Murray thinks enough of Butler's rise to put him on with Gallant proves the former boy must have come through—or is climbing to the fore, anyhow.

This will be Gallant's first start in Boston since Charley White, the clever Chicagoan, knocked him stiff. However, that Waterloo can well be forgotten, as White stopped seven battlers in Boston last year, Baldwin, Saylor, Thomas, Murphy, Yelle and Arreedo, as well as Gallant. Gil's lone important date during the past Winter season was when MacLean took him out in Denver, where he trimmed the pride of the Rockies, Stanley Yoakum, the Mexican.

MacLean claims Gallant is better than ever; that the lay-off he took is just what he needed.

The claim is made Gallant and Butler are to make 138 pounds at 3 o'clock. That should be a snap for Gallant, who formerly never had much trouble scaling down to the light weight limit, while Butler states it is Butler's best figure and Walter will be cheery pipe.

The bout ought to prove interesting, even if business does fall off. If the house proves anywhere near as big as the last two, it will only be because the boxing fans rally behind what they start will make, as on paper, it isn't any whale of an attraction.

STODDARD IS IN FINALS.

Hartford, Ct., June 17.—Owing to the rain only one semi-finals match was played in the New England tennis championship tournament. R. S. Stoddard, Yale, defeated F. W. Cole, Harvard, 6—4. Stoddard plays the winner of the Cushing-Weber match this afternoon.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 17. —Time of races and positions of crews in the intercollegiate regatta:

Junior Varsity, 4 p. m.—No. 1, Columbia; No. 2, Syracuse; No. 3, Cornell; No. 4, Pennsylvania.

Freshman Race, 4:35 p. m.—No. 1, Cornell; No. 2, Columbia; No. 3, Pennsylvania; No. 4, Syracuse.

Varsity Race, 6 p. m.—No. 1, Columbia; No. 2, Pennsylvania; No. 3, Syracuse; No. 4, Cornell.

The records: Varsity, Cornell, 18:52 1-5, July 2, 1901; freshman, Cornell, 9:11 3-5, July 2, 1900; junior varsity, Cornell, 10 1-5, June 28, 1915.

Columbia-Cornell Are Favored in Big Regatta

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 17.—Never before in the history of the Poughkeepsie regatta has the weather been so dismal. Late yesterday afternoon there was a nasty southeast wind blowing against the ebb tide and pelting rain that kept most of the crews under shelter.

Late last night it was blowing a gale, and the weather sharps predict rough water for the afternoon. The morning broke cold and damp.

If there is rough going, Columbia and Cornell, from what they did in practice, will be more at home than the others. Syracuse will be next in this respect, while Pennsylvania, accustomed to the placid Schuylkill, will be far more at sea than the others.

Cornell has the outriggers a bit lower than the others, but it is a very easy matter to put a washer under the lower legs in case the water calls for the change.

BING RESULTS

Rochester, N. Y., June 17.—Jimmy Anderson of Indianapolis defeated Walter Mohr of Brooklyn in every round of their ten-round bout here.

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 17.—Jake Abel of Chattanooga outpointed Lee Kelly of St. Louis in eight rounds.

Tulsa, Okla., June 17.—Carl Morris of Sapulpa knocked out Dan Daley of Newcastle, Pa., in the first round.

New York, June 17.—Johnny Solberg outpointed Johnny Best of Scotland in a ten-round bout in Brooklyn. In the seventh and tenth rounds Solberg scored knockdowns. It was the latter's first bout in this country.

ATLANTIC LEAGUE MAY TAKE COUNT

Philadelphia, June 17.—The Atlantic League is on the ragged edge and may blow up in the near future. No games were played Thursday, and the directors of the young independent circuit held a meeting here to consider the future of the league. It is up to them to decide whether the league will continue or quit. The former has been doing well, but some of the other towns are going badly.

SPICY RACING CARD ON AT FRAMINGHAM

The final day's racing of the Short Ship Circuit meeting at Farmingham takes place today in four classes. Among the entries for the New England pacing championship is Evelyn W., with a record of 2:09¼. In addition to the money prize in the 2:35 trot, W. J. McDonald has donated a cup for the winner. The other classes are the 2:29 trot and 2:20 pace.

Their Married Life

Helen Drops In on Frances and Anne, and While There a Tragedy Develops

(Copyright, 1916, by International News Service.)

"I'm dead tired," said Frances, slipping the strings of her shopping bag over her arm. "Let's go home and I'll make some tea. I have some fresh rice cakes, too, and you know you are crazy about them."

Helen did not need much urging and the two made their way to the tiny apartment which Frances and Anne Redding shared together.

"Have you selected your place yet?" Helen inquired as they entered the lobby.

"Just about. I am going to move in the latter part of June. That is, I am going to have all my things taken over and as a general sense take possession before I go out to Kansas."

Frances fitted the key into the lock of her apartment and suddenly it was opened from within and Anne's laughing face peered out. "I thought that was you," she said delightedly. "Helen Curtis, where have you been? I thought you had deserted Jack and me."

"Helen laughed and knew you were busy, dear, but Warren and I want to have you up to dinner some night next week. Frances, you must come, too, and I'll get some man for you to flirt with."

"Well, not Dr. Marshall," Frances protested, "and I'll promise I can't flirt with Dr. Marshall, actually I haven't the temerity, he is so young and full of illusions."

"Wouldn't one think her terribly cynical?" laughed Anne. "And we knew that she isn't at all, don't we, Helen?"

Helen sank into one of the comfortable chairs and watched Frances pour the alcohol into the lamp and adjust the brass kettle.

"I have something for you, Anne," she said suddenly, reaching for a parcel.

"For me? How lovely. Every one is being so good to me. What is it?" And Anne, with trembling fingers, unwound the wrappings and disclosed a dainty lace scarf.

"That's just a little gift from me, the gift of silver was from both Mr. Curtis and self."

"But," protested Anne, "it's too much, really, Helen, you oughn't to do so much for me."

SOMETHING TO EAT

Helen laughed and at that moment Frances returned with a silver dish filled with preserved ginger and a plate of rice wafers.

"There's the telephone, Anne," she said, as she sliced the lemon with a tiny knife. "I know it's for you."

And Anne tripped lightly over to the telephone and took the receiver from the hook.

"It's for you, dear," she said, after a few preliminary words. "I can't make out the voice."

Frances put down her tea things calmly and crossed over to the telephone. Helen could not help noticing how the late afternoon sun touched the girl's tall slim figure; the blue shirt and the simple white blouse low at the throat. Her hair was loose in fluffed waves of glory, and it was a long time before Helen forgot the picture she made standing there.

"What's that you say?" Frances said, a little sharply. "I can't hear you." And then all the color fled from her cheeks and she trembled a little. "Yes, I understand, you want me to come right over. He is asking for me? I will be well, I will come." And she hung up the receiver with a little click.

"What is it dear?" said Anne, tenderly, hurrying over to Frances, where she leaned for a moment against the wall.

Helen sat perfectly still. Something told here that the only thing in the world that could make Frances look like that was Avery Atwood.

Frances was almost herself again in a moment. She straightened up and walked quickly into her tiny bedroom, followed by Anne and Helen.

"You might as well know," she said, slipping into her coat and the hat that she had just taken off. "It's Carp."

That word Carp told a volume, and Helen felt the tears spring to her eyes.

"He's been hurt," Frances' voice went on, "and he is asking for me. Of course I must go."

Frances spoke almost toneiessly, she did not give way to any emotion. Anne offered to go with her, but she shok her head.

"No, I'll take a taxi, I don't need anyone. I want to think."

It was only when she was leaving that she gripped Helen's hand close and whispered:

A TRAGIC THOUGHT

"What if he should die? He mustn't die, Helen. I couldn't bear it."

Then she was gone, and Helen and Anne turned and faced each other. Helen hardly knew what to say because she was not aware of how much Anne knew about the situation. Anne evidently surmised this and she said simply:

"I knew all about it, Helen. I couldn't live here with Frances and not know that she was unhappy. Why, she does nothing but work; she is almost feverish about it as though she hated to give her mind a minute for anything but the things she writes. If could have been someone else! Oh, if it only could have been someone else!"

And Anne's cry was echoed in Helen's heart. Why was it that Frances, beautiful, talented Frances, with her capacity for feeling and her elements of greatness should have fallen in love with a man that she could not marry? It seemed a hard, terrible thing. A thing Helen could not understand.

Good Housekeeping Recipes

Good food properly cooked goes far toward insuring health and long years. As much depends on the cooking, however, as on the food itself. The following recipes have been tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute, conducted by GOOD HOUSEKEEPING, and are republished here by special arrangement with that publication, the Nation's Greatest Home Magazine.

All measurements are level, standard half-pint measuring cups, tablespoons, and teaspoons being used. Sixteen level tablespoonfuls equal a half-pint. Quantities are sufficient for six people unless otherwise stated. Flour is sifted once before measuring.

Strawberry Mousse.

One box hulled strawberries, cut fine, one and one-half cups sugar, one and one-half cupfuls rich milk, one cupful heavy cream. Mash the berries and let stand over night with the sugar. In the morning rub through a sieve and add the milk. Fold this mixture into the cream, which should be whipped stiff, and pour into a mold. Cover tightly and bury in equal parts of ice and salt for four hours. Open and stir after the second hour. This is not a genuine mousse, which is a much richer and smoother ice, but is a most satisfactory substitute.

Tomato Hors d'Oeuvres

Remove skins from the required number of very small, uniform-sized tomatoes. Scoop out centers and fill with Roquefort cheese which has been beaten smooth with a little cream. Place on round slices of bread which have been toasted and buttered or fried brown in deep fat, cover tops of tomatoes with caviar, thrust a sprig of cress in the top of each, and arrange on salad plates, covering with small paper doilies. Garnish further with cress if desired.

Spanish Rice.

Two slices of bacon, diced; one cupful stewed tomatoes, one green pepper shredded, three tablespoonfuls cooked rice, one and one-half cupfuls boiled rice; salt and paprika to taste. Fry the bacon; add the tomato, pepper and onion. Season and let cook till thoroughly done. Then add the rice and serve hot.

HAIR AND OTHER BEAUTIFUL THINGS

The Care of Your Hair—Advice on this important matter, and hints as to the best way to cultivate your other beauties, given by Lina Cavalieri herself. You will find them in tomorrow's Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

Household Suggestions

To protect children against accidents from fire, an excellent plan is to soak their clothing for five minutes in a solution of one pound of ammonium phosphate in a gallon of cold water. The fireproofing is non-poisonous, keeps indefinitely, does no more harm to the material than ordinary water, and is recommended for treating not only light clothing, but curtains and other inflammable fabrics.

When cleaning wine-stained decanters, put into them some tea-leaves, a little sand, and some warm soapy water. Shake well till the stain is removed, then rinse thoroughly in clear water, and stand upside down to drain dry.

* * *

When cleaning oilcloth put two tablespoonfuls of turpentine into the bucket of water, and the result will be that the oilcloth will look much brighter.

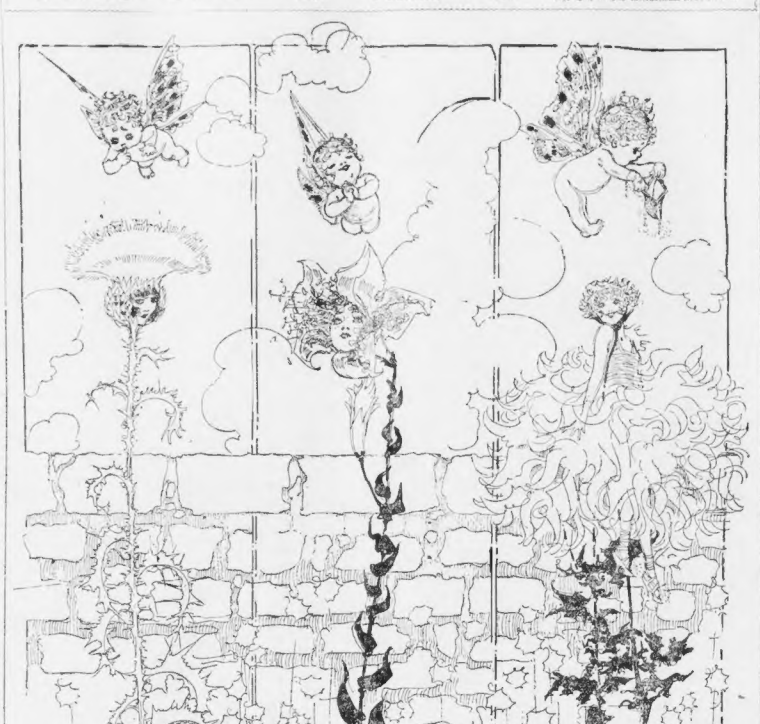
Leather chairs are cleaned with a rag dipped in a mixture of equal parts of vinegar and linseed oil and then polished with a dry duster.

"Flower-Girls"

"And So I Am a Bachelor"

By NELL BRINKLEY

(Copyright, 1916, by International News Service.)



THE THISTLE. TOO SHARP! TOO SHARP! THE LILY. SWEET — TOO SWEET! CHRYSANTHEMUM TOO HIGH!

"ONCE," cried the bachelor, "I climbed up and looked over the wall into the garden of Love. My house—a little one—was getting full of echoes. My friends—all happy—had shinnied up the wall and snatched themselves themselves a buttonhole blossom to wear over the heart. I had two tall, straight chairs at my breakfast table, and one lowered empty and bored. I sat gloomily in the other one. So I propped the paper between me and IT. And when it got so that I could see the empty chair through the paper, and began to weave from my fancy a shape to sit graciously between its arms, to argue with my stuckup looking coffee-pot whether she should have bright gold hair or stormy dark, then I went out into the world and walked about!

"But it was Spring outside, shimmering green Spring, a green and blossomy lacework done on a background of heaven-blue, with the sunshine dripping down in a myriad sprinklings. And you remember what Spring does to a lone bachelor! So I flew as fast as my thinish legs could carry me to the garden. And I climbed and sought. But I must have just chanced to choose an unfortunate spot in the wall, for the flowers that lay beneath my pirate eye and within reach of my hungry fingers were not—were not the magic blossom.

"The Thistle was most delicately colored—all rare, pale lilac, and rose, and tender green. But the pallor of color was the high tone of passion and my Thistle had a temper and was thorned amazing! I nursed an impaled finger and flew me to the Lily. The Lily was sweet—so sweet—so white. Too sweet. I and a drugged bee flew heavily away—dizzy with the sugary perfume—to seek more color—more vivacity. The Lily would never have argued with me and would have always said "No" when I shook my head and "Yes" when I wagged it.

"Stunned, I hovered above the Chrysanthemum—all gold, all fluff and dainty swirl of skirts and wits! Here were beauty and gayety—nodding in the wind—a laughing, extravagant flower. And I knew I had the easement of my loneliness! Manlike, I liked her gown and shook it viciously to roll all my wealth in one—and there was not enough! My gorgeous flower would need to be taken care of. And so I feasted on her loveliness and breathed, "Too high!" there on the wall a little while before I went me home to my other empty chair and to argue with my coffee-pot.

"So that is why I am a bachelor. I did not see a violet there, or a single rose. I have seen some out in the world—as I passed them on the street, but they were not in the particular corner of the garden that Fate gave me to choose from —and I could not speak to them!"

Girl Workers Who Win

The Maid Who at Last Found Her Chance to Make Good

By JANE McLEAN

Celia was what is known as a maid of all work. That is, she cooked, cleaned and washed for her living. Sometimes she fared well, and sometimes there were places where even her simple demands were refused and then it was she was forced to move on and search for a new place. She did not demand much. She wanted a clean room and a little time to herself. What Celia really needed was understanding. She did not mind hard work, for she was strong and well, but she liked an occasional kind word and cheery smile, for even in her simple mind those things meant life.

When she went back to the intelligence office after losing her last place the woman greeted her none too pleasantly.

"Why don't you specialize in something," she said quickly. "I have positions for cooks and ladies' maids. Do you think you could try something like that?"

Celia knew that she could not cook elaborately enough to go out as a cook. She could not cook enough for ordinary requirements, but her specialties were nothing extra. A ladies' maid she did not want to be. Weren't there any positions for general housework? She inquired timidly.

"I have one here, five in family, minister's wife. Think you'd like that?" And the woman looked up. "It'll be hard, but you might as well try it."

"Yes, I'll take it."

"Well, they want you right away, here's the address. You can go right up." And once more the woman bent over her huge book while Celia made her way out on the street.

The street that Celia had on the slip of paper was not in a fashionable neighborhood. A tired little woman with a sweet face opened the door to her ring, and she smiled very sweetly as she said:

"You must be the new maid. Won't you come right in? You'll find things pretty well upset, but I have had so much to do all alone."

Celia smiled in response and followed the little woman upstairs to a very plain, very clean little room with a comfortable looking bed and a picture of a baby hung over a little oak dresser.

"This is your room. The nursery is right down the hall. I have three children," and the little woman's face lighted up as if that possession were the dearest in the world. "Would you like to see them? They are getting ready for bed now. I put them to bed at 5:30 o'clock every night."

Celia had never been treated with such an air of equality before; it made her feel happier somehow, and she did like children if they were nice children.

"Here they are," said the mother. "Donald, this is Celia, she's going to help mother take care of you. Say how do you do, Howard, and baby, can't you smile a little? This is my little girl, Rose Marie."

The children all crowded about Celia and again that little feeling of belonging swept to her heart. Afterward when she was following Mrs. Townsend downstairs she said impulsively, "I think I'll like it here."

"I hope you will," was the quick response. "The work won't be easy, but we are all very happy, and there's plenty of love."

And Celia resolutely squeezed back a tear, a little chary of showing that she was silly enough to cry because she was happy.

The Beginning of Things

How the Lighter Chemical Elements Form in Nebulae and Heavier Atoms in Cooling Suns

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"I want to see more on the wonders of the universe. At present I feel that what would interest me most is the origin of metals—gold, for instance. How has gold been formed? What was it before it was gold? Is gold still forming from a former substance? Of course the same will apply to platinum and silver in a varied degree. —J. J."

We must go back to the nebulae to find an answer to your question. Gold came out of the original fire mist like all the other elements, whether they appear to us now in the form of metals, rocks, liquids or gases. Let your imagination transport you some thousand million years into the past when our particular corner of space was apparently an empty gap.

It contained nothing but electricity in its primeval form of electrons—indescribable, infinitesimal —and all alike in their minuteness and their potentiality. The electrons swirled together and began to gleam and flash, forming an "electrical vapor." It was the birth of light, the first of created things.

What dim, wondrous memory inspired the man who, in the earliest records of his thoughts, he declared that in the beginning was darkness and that God's first command was: "Let there be light"? Man had no science when he made that declaration, but today, when he has science, it repeats for him the same formula. All of our discoveries concerning the nature of matter lead back to the one conclusion—everything began in a luminous cloud.

EXISTENCE OF MATTER CAME WITH BIRTH OF ATOMS.

In that cloud the spinning electrons gathered into atoms, and with the birth of atoms what we know as matter came into existence. At first the speed of the electrons was so great that no densely packed atoms were formed. The first elements recognizable as such were three or four light gases, two of which, called hydrogen and helium, we are acquainted with upon the earth, while two others, of which we have no experimental knowledge, are to be seen glowing in the nebulae that are still scattered through the depths of space.

Back of these elements it is probable there was at least one that was still lighter with yet simpler atoms.

After seons of time had rolled by a new star was born out of the condensing nebula. It was the baby sun, and just as ordinary babies have few ideas in their heads, so the newborn sun had few elements in its composition.

It consisted mostly of hydrogen. We see a proof of that when we find that stars which are yet in an early stage of evolution are composed mainly of hydrogen and some of helium, while others contain a still more primitive element, asterium.

But with continued condensation heavier atoms, consisting of larger numbers of electrons, were formed, and these constituted denser elements. When our star, the sun, had condensed as far as Sirius has done Sirius is a younger sun than some of the metallic elements, which when cooled form solids, were born.

SUN HAS LARGE NUMBER OF ELEMENTS KNOWN TO EARTH

These increased in number and density as time went on until, as it now is, the sun possesses a large number of the elements known to us upon the earth, such as iron, calcium, silicon, sodium and soma thirty others which are recognizable with the spectroscope.

But, owing to the high temperature of the sun, these elements are there all in the gaseous or vaporous state. Still, their atoms have been formed, and thus they can be recognized.

It is probable from what we see in the stars, where various stages of evolution are exhibited, that the heavier elements have all been formed from the lighter ones by the aggregation of greater and greater numbers of electrons into atoms. This evolution continues after a star has cooled and condensed into a planet, like the earth. Even the vapor of gold has not been found in the sun, and it may be that no metal so dense as gold can be formed under stellar conditions of temperature.

But gold exists in the earth because here heavier atoms can be formed than is possible in the furnace of the sun. In the earth's interior it may be that gold is still forming from lighter elements. All the gold within our reach has come from the older rocks of the earth, those which cooled first. It is relatively small in quantity, and the same is true of all the elements composed of very heavy atoms, because these elements have been formed last, when the process of atomic condensation had become very slow. The earlier, lighter elements, like hydrogen, evidently were formed with comparatively great rapidity.

DECAY OF HEAVY ELEMENTS FINAL CHAPTER OF STORY

But there is another chapter to the story, which seems to be just beginning, at least on the earth. The phenomena of radio-activity indicate that the heavy elements finally decay and disappear, their atoms losing their accumulation of electrons, until they change into light, gaseous elements, or possibly return, in the end, to the original state of "electrical vapor." Shakespeare had a wonderful fore-vision when he wrote:

"The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

AN ENGAGEMENT RECEPTION

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My engagement reception will be held in a ball room of a hotel, from 3 in the afternoon until 6, and I would like to know if I would be allowed to wear my evening dress or an afternoon dress. And about my fiance, does he have to wear full dress? Could I wear a business suit? Would it be proper for me to carry a bouquet, or shall I only wear a corsage bouquet? V. B.

EVEN in this modern day, when the world has gone dance mad, I think an engagement reception is much more dignified if there is no dancing. However, let your inclinations decide the matter for you. The question of propriety is not involved. As a general rule the bride-to-be wears an evening dress even at an afternoon reception. With this in her mind, I think an article of flowers looks rather prettier than a corsage bouquet. Your fiance must not wear a full dress suit—full dress is reserved for evening occasions. Frock coat and striped trousers is the regulation costume.

CONSIDER CAREFULLY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Unknown to my parents I have been going about with a young man for the past year. I am twenty-one and get $12 a week. He wants to marry me in Spring. She has a good voice and can go on the stage to tide over our financial difficulty.

ARNOLD W.

WHETHER or not the girl you love makes a success on the stage is a matter between you, her parents and herself. You have no guarantee of her success nor can you be sure that if she did succeed she would be happy and contented as the wife of a poor man. Against the stage I have no prejudice whatever, but in your particular case I think you should look at the matter carefully and from every angle.

EXPLAIN YOURSELF.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Kindly advise me if I did right in refusing an invitation to my girl friend's house when the rest of the family was away, I knowing that we would be alone.

When she asked me I thought the best way to avoid talk, which is so often unjust, was to decline.

D. U. C.

EXPLAIN your attitude carefully to this young girl. She probably is a nice-minded girl who does not realize the tendency of the world to gossip and the amount of weight a man who really cares for a girl has sometimes to give to it in order to protect her name. As a matter of fact, I think there was no real necessity for you to act as you did, since it is hard to put one's self in the ranks of the evil minded. After all, if the girl was going to be alone she may have wanted companionship because she was lonely or timid and she may have turned to you as her best and most trusted friend.

That Kind

A frivolous young English girl, with no love for the Stars and Stripes, once exclaimed at a celebration where the American flag was very much in evidence:

"Oh, what a pity something thing the American flag is!. It suggests nothing but checkerberry candy."

"Yes," replied a bystander, "the kind of candy that has made everybody sick who ever tried to lick it."

Women Get Relief

It is unnecessary for you to suffer with neuralgia or pains in the face and head. Women folks as well as men will be pleased to learn that using Minard's Liniment is the surest guarantee of her success to relieve pain instantly. This liniment is the physician's prescription is all that is ever needed to give quick relief. It is a wonderfully soothing, creamy liniment that does not stain or blister and is positively pure, clean and easy to use. Ask your druggist or your neighbor, for Minard's has been used in many homes for more than sixty years as the one dependable liniment for pain of all kinds.—Advertisement.

ROOKIES SPEND JUNE 17 IN 1ST REAL BATTLE

The AMERICAN has sent Willard H. Davis to the citizens' camp at Plattsburg to tell how Boston and other New England citizens are training to help defend this nation efficiently in case of war. The preparedness parades throughout the country have shown that the nation is aroused at last to the necessity of being prepared. It is today the one big important issue in the nation. Mr. Davis will tell from day to day how the citizens are working to learn how to defend the nation and to lead others in its defense.

By WILLARD H. DAVIS,
Staff Correspondent Boston American.

Plattsburg, N. Y., June 17.—Boston's Regiment "De Luxe" celebrated Bunker Hill Day by engaging in their first real battle. The three battalions at the training camp participated in an affray in the woods outside of Plattsburg.

Blank cartridges were used. Shortly after 6 o'clock Companies A, B, C and D left camp for parts unknown. At about 8 o'clock the other two battalions, comprising Companies E, F, G, H, K, L and M started out in an endeavor to locate the "enemy" and engage in battle with them.

As far as any special celebration goes, Bunker Hill Day means nothing to the Boston men. True, they realize with great seriousness the importance of that date in American history, but as for midnight bonfires, club dinners, patriotic celebrations and athletic events, they were not in the order of events at Plattsburg.

JUNE 17 MEANS WORK.

June 17 at Plattsburg means a fifteen-mile hike across the countryside, a skirmish in the underbrush and swamps, arising at 5:45 a. m., eating a breakfast of bacon and eggs on an aluminum plate, and a general continuance of stringent rules and regulations of a military camp where business men are learning to be soldiers.

The Back Bay clubmen who would spend the Boston holiday on the golf course found his gun instead of his golf clubs in his hand. The bank clerk who in all probability would spend the day "upriver," spent it in the swamps and brooks of "Peru, the Battlefield of the Rookies."

Despite the continued rainy weather, the sort that even takes the spirit out of the hardened regulars, these men continue to like Plattsburg, even though they are disgusted with the weather.

DON'T MIND THE RAIN.

Since the boys arrived, nearly two weeks ago, it has rained every day, with the exception of one day. Some of them have not had their feet dry since they arrived, yet you can't find a sick man among them, and Major Shaw, head of the medical corps, is still to have his first serious case of illness.

When the men rolled out of their cots they were literally baptized with the heavy rain which was falling. No sun, no warm breeze, nothing but rain, a cold, biting wind from Lake Champlain, and damp boots to put on their feet.

After being out in the storm all day, skirmishing about in the woods, they return from a twelve-mile "hike" tired out, but with the ever-present whistle and song on their lips.

"It is the most remarkable spirit I have ever seen," said one of the officers of the camp to me as we stood and watched the boys, drenched to the skin, march into camp singing "It's going to stop raining in the sweet by-and-by."

NO BERRIES FOR HIM.

One of the men attracting considerable attention for his excellent work as a second year man, with the rank of first sergeant, or "top" sergeant, is C. M. Chadwick of No. 147 Milk street. He keeps in close touch with the men in his squads and assists them in their daily instructions. He is one of the most popular men in Company I.

Harold Wade's fondness for wild strawberries, according to the story that is going through camp, resulted in a few moments' uneasiness for Harold, during one of the hikes recently, while crawling on his stomach looking for "enemies" he happened across what he believed to be a wild strawberry bed.

Harold plucked the inviting looking berries and ate many of them. Suddenly he was seized with a terrible thirst. Investigation proved that the "strawberries" were of a foreign extract. No one really knew just what they were, but the fact remains that Harold emptied five canteens before he arrived back in camp.

WONDERFUL CONSTITUTION.

Dr. Frank Konrad of No. 64 Commonwealth avenue is enjoying the life of a "rookie" immensely. I found him sitting on an old soap box near his tent reading a Boston paper. He said:

With all this rain I wouldn't miss Plattsburg and the benefits derived from being here for a good deal. I have kept in fine condition and would like to spend the entire Summer here. All young men who can possibly get away should attend the camp.

It is a wonderful institution and the knowledge one gets of the importance of being prepared is well worth the time spent here.

I am in perfect condition and have not heard of any sickness to speak of.

Tomorrow the boys will enjoy their second day of complete rest. A majority of the men will attend services in Plattsburg and at the post chapel. Several have planned trips into the Adirondacks. Those who go across the line into Canada will have to go in civilian clothes.

BUSY WEEK COMING.

Some of the anglers in the Boston crowd are to try their luck in the streams about the camp. Bright and early Monday morning more hikes and longer ones will be the order, followed by target practice and more skirmishes. The coming week will be a strenuous one and the boys will take advantage of Sunday to rest up.

The only Massachusetts man to leave camp thus far is Arthur H. Oladwin, president of the Whitmer Manufacturing Company of Roxbury. He stated that important business necessitated his departure.

CHURCH NEWS of GREATER BOSTON

The singing of Christ continues in the Bible Sunday Tabernacle, and will be one of the features of the domestic evangelistic campaign to begin next Sunday. Some 500 persons have been enrolled in the choir, which will be under the direction of Homer A. Rodeheaver, who has been associated with Billy Sunday for many years. Mrs. Rodeheaver will be at the piano. Mrs. Rodeheaver is the mother of two children in Brighton and is a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music. Mr. Rodeheaver will arrive in Boston on Monday. He will be assisted by Charles M. Alexander, who has been associated with Mr. Sunday in his evangelistic campaigns for many years. Mr. Alexander will arrive in Boston on Tuesday. He will be accompanied by his wife and daughter. Mr. Alexander will lead the singing at the noon meetings in Tremont Temple, which will begin on Monday. Mr. Alexander will also lead the singing at the meetings in the Bible Sunday Tabernacle, which will begin on Tuesday evening. Mr. Alexander will be assisted by Harold Marshall, a tenor singer.

The Universalists of Greater Boston have announced the opening of a campaign of education and evangelism, which will begin next week. Special meetings, addresses and sermons will be given in the churches of the denomination in this section. The campaign will be under the direction of a number of clergymen, among whom are Rev. Harold Marshall, Rev. Dr. John Wright, a former rector, now of St. Paul Minn., will preach the sermon

A Statesmanlike Opinion on a Very Serious Problem

As we follow the public career and public service of Congressman Augustus P. Gardner, we are more and more impressed with the sense of his growing public spirit and vision.

He began his national political career under very inauspicious circumstances. But today he has risen above cheap politics and takes the views and has the courage of real statesmanship. It is known that he works hard in Washington; that he thinks out the problems of the country. It is known in Massachusetts that he has the courage of his convictions and that he is willing to tell the public what they are, to stand up for them and to take the consequences of their advocacy.

Mr. Gardner is not yet as progressive as we should like to see him, but, as Lincoln described his own administration, while he may be "stumbling along" he is "stumbling along in the right direction." A man who thinks profoundly and unselfishly and courageously on great national questions is bound to develop along progressive lines. Men may be reactionary in this country and be honest, but they cannot be reactionary if they think hard and are entirely unselfish and fearless.

Mr. Gardner, in a Flag Day address, expressed a statesmanlike opinion on a very serious problem. We quote it:

> "The time has come for the nation to look the situation squarely in the face. If we are to retain our lead in the world's affairs, if we are to acquire the affection and the loyal fealty of the immigrants who have come to our shores, we must engraft on our free institutions a measure of the disciplined and yet benevolent paternalism which has won the hearts of the German people to the autocratic rule of the Kaiser. We must centralize in the national government at Washington many of the powers still jealously retained by the States. Backward States with backward laws which permit the exploitation of labor must no longer be permitted to palsy the efforts of States like our own, which seek continually to improve industrial conditions."

If the manufacturers of Massachusetts and New England would devote their energy to compelling national social welfare legislation which would prevent the products manufactured in States where workmen are indecently treated to be sold in the rest of the United States, they would help themselves much more intelligently and effectively than by opposing the social welfare legislation in Massachusetts. This last year alone they compelled the Republican party to break its faith with the Progressives on the platform promises to better the condition of workmen in factories where they are obliged to work the entire twenty-four hours a day. It is stupid, short-sighted work. We need uniform national labor laws, divorce laws and taxation laws.

Japanese Gunners in Russia

They Are Not Practicing Artillery There for Their HEALTH, Exactly

Copyright, 1916, by the Star Company.

THERE is nothing like shooting at men to make good soldiers.

Killing other human beings is work to which man must become accustomed to do it well.

Target practice is good—shooting with rifle or cannon at something that cannot be killed is only good target practice.

But nothing is quite as good to make a soldier as killing real human beings.

The Japanese realize that.

A representative of our government who recently came back from Russia said that what interested him very much was the number of Japanese gunners working in the Russian army for practice.

Japan, as you know, sides with the allies, and she takes this opportunity of training her gunners, shooting Germans and Austrians and getting new experience in KILLING.

These Japanese gunners are put where THEY will be fairly safe while they kill at long range. They are out of practice, that is understood. The Russians are glad to get their services, for the Japanese have been practicing the art of killing very carefully for some years.

In the French illustrated papers you notice now and then a group of officers watching the fighting, and you observe that some of these officers are shorter in stature than others.

They are all dressed about alike, wearing the little steel helmets that the French have invented to guard against small pieces of exploding steel.

These shorter men, carefully studied, are seen to be Japanese officers.

They are watching at close range in France, in Italy, wherever they can, THE MODERN METHODS OF KILLING MEN WHOLESALE.

All of this ought to interest us people of the United States, considering that the next big enterprise that the Japanese have in mind IS AN ATTACK ON THIS COUNTRY.

While their gunners are practicing killing as individuals in Russia, and their officers are studying the art of wholesale killing in France, the Japanese government is voicing its grievances against our government, its protest against exclusion from this country—a very good working combination.

Here in America the Japanese government is building up a good excuse for making an attack.

And in Europe, where the fighting is done, the Japanese officers are getting experience in the work that they expect to do here.

Meanwhile, what is the United States doing, what are ITS gunners and officers doing, what sign is there on the part of government that the condition of things is realized?

This matter ought to interest you.

The Liberty of the Human Scalp

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects

EVER since the days of the Pilgrim Fathers and the Pequot war we have been keenly interested in the welfare of our scalps and the best method of raising hair on them. The Indian method of hair raising was a trifle abrupt and radical, not to say heroic, but the experience of its handful of victims, who were left for dead and survived the process, would seem to indicate that the final result in baldness was not as complete as that which comes spontaneously by the slow tooth of time.

For some singular reason we resent as bitterly and dread almost as keenly the loss of our crowning glory by the slow and harmless and peaceful passing of the years as we do its abrupt removal among all the risks of battle, murder and sudden death.

We smile at Mr. A. Ward's story of the nearly bald-headed man in the Western mining camp when the Apaches were out and the little settlement in hourly dread of a murderous swoop, who every night before he went to bed threw a skate strap over his few remaining hairs and buckled it tightly under his chin. Death he could face, but not disfigurement. And he has many sympathizers abroad in the land among the about-to-be bald, especially in the gentler and only ornamental sex.

"I'd rather be dead than hairless" has echoed scores of times in every dermatologist's consulting room. And the man who would invent some sure fertilizer for raising a full crop of hair on a bald pate would make a huge fortune in less time than he who would discover a cure for consumption.

In spite, however, of the extraordinary value which we place upon our hair there is no part of the body for whose real welfare and health as such we do less than for the scalp. Usually the only time when we begin to take a real and personal interest in our scalp is when it begins to come through our hair. Almost the entire attention which we give to the native covering of our heads begins in and ends in our hair, its curl, its brilliancy, its arrangement.

If the scalp will simply keep itself out of sight and refrain from shedding scales and dandruff over our shoulder, which don't match the color of our clothes, we are content to take its condition for granted and leave it alone. Yet this is about as rational as combing and parting a field of wheat and neglecting the roots from which it springs and the soil in which it grows.

A scrupulously clean, well-ventilated and above all well-exercised scalp is the real secret of an adequate and enduring crop of hair.

The measures for securing these health rights for the scalp are neither expensive nor elaborate nor difficult. They are on the contrary within the reach of all, and one of the reasons which makes us so comparatively indifferent to them is their very simplicity and the ease with which they can be applied. It seems absurd to expect to accomplish anything toward such a high and difficult task as the prevention or even diminution of baldness by such simple every-day means.

For the scrupulous cleanliness of the scalp, nothing is better than a judicious combination, applied at regular intervals, of these now unrivalled and most effective antiseptics and disinfectants ever yet discovered—Saponis Alba and Aqua Pura. In other words, hot water, which has been sterilized by boiling, and pure white soap made out of sound fats.

Keep the scalp perfectly clean and, like the rest of your skin, it will easily shed or take care of itself nine-tenths of the "bugs" which alight upon it. No germicide, "purpicide" or insecticide ever invented will produce half the massacre of germs in the scalp that pure soap and water will. The right intervals of application are in the short hair of children and men once a week, and in the long hair of women twice a month. The only precautions observed are to "lather" thoroughly, using the tips of the fingers vigorously upon the scalp, rinse very thoroughly and rub or brush completely dry afterward as speedily as possible.

Water applied to the head does no harm at all and much good both to the hair and the scalp, but if small amounts of it are left on the head so as to keep the scalp and deeper parts of the hair moist for hours it is apt to set up a rancid fermentation in the natural oil of the hair, giving rise to the familiar sour or heavy smell of seldom washed and neglected heads and irritating the delicate surface of the scalp by the (butyric) acid produced.

A Rhapsody

By Jane McLean

THE north wind loves the white birch tree,
And dreams of her as fair;
She feels his breath against her face,
But I—I breathe your hair.

The mountains reach with rocky arms
To touch the quiet skies,
And spell out love words in the stars;
But I—I read your eyes.

The sun rests on the sea's calm breast
And gilds the lazy ships,
Each has the thing he loves the best
And I—I have your lips.

Thoughts by the Way

It is hard for a woman to see the difference between the $2 a month which she spends for gloves and the cost of four 50-cent teas which her husband buys in the same length of time.

There are a lot of men who would storm over such an equal distribution of the family funds.

To be successful in saving, the husband and wife should work together.

To keep up a regular system of deposits requires a great deal of self-denial on the part of each.

It cannot be done alone by either husband or wife.

It must be worked as a combination, otherwise one may save and the other may spend.

Early in married life there should be a mutual agreement, with complete understanding concerning matters of this sort, and each should live strictly up to that agreement.

The life partnership should be a real partnership, as the best and truest friends in the world would live; for the good of both.

The "Ins" and "Outs" on the Boston Licensing Board

Not to Mention the Duke of Manchester's Views on Love; the Bewildering Beautiful Girl with the Curls; the Wildly Extravagant Dinner in a Boston Hotel, Plattsburg; the Mayor of Avon and the Next Mayor of Everett—and More and More—All in the Sunday AMERICAN.

When Governor Walsh was defeated by Samuel W. McCall last Summer, some said the Boston liquor men did it.

And there are those who trace a sequence of events from that rumor to the appointment of a new chairman of the Licensing Board by Governor McCall.

The term of one member of the Board is just ending; another—the present chairman—has resigned; and a new member and chairman has been appointed.

Which furnishes Boston with many matters to talk about. You will find all the latest developments in this interesting situation, together with information as to those who go and as to him who comes in, in the Sunday AMERICAN.

When your wife is in the country this Summer, you'll no doubt dine in town once or twice.

But—what with vacation money and everything—it is safe to predict that you will decline to pay $117 for your dinner.

Recently, a man paid that price for twelve dinners at a Boston hotel; and there were many brilliant accessories to that repast. It broke records for Boston dinners.

But there is one aspect of that dinner which has been kept profoundly "under cover." We might say more; but we refrain.

You will find full particulars in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Avon is a town. But there is a "Mayor of Avon." His multiple offices would crush the Gilbert and Sullivan gentleman under a load of duties. He is a real "Pooh Bah."

But he is a storm centre, just now. Many things are happening; some to him, and some to others.

You will want to read about this Sunday. To do so, you need only buy the Sunday AMERICAN.

Now, Everett is another story. Everett has a Mayor. Some day she will have another.

There is some difference of opinion as to who is going to be the next Mayor of Everett.

At least one man frankly asserts that he expects to hold that position, and enjoy the honors and emoluments thereof.

He may be right. At least, he puts forth his claims in a very forcible and convincing manner. Incidentally, he has much to say as to Everett's internal affairs.

When you read this man's statement in the Sunday AMERICAN you will understand why—when other Everett gentlemen try to sit on him—they receive a distinct impression that they have sat upon a tack.

Dartmouth has a new President; and the new President has some new ideas.

Some older educators will quarrel with them; some will approve.

In any event, there is ground for predicting some interesting changes in the curriculum at the "College in the Hills." Dartmouth men who retain an interest in their college—and we understand that quite a few of them do—will want to read this article in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Where do you eat lunch?

What is your restaurant's score?

The Boston Health Commissioner has been going here and there among the Boston restaurants, looking under the tables, and lifting the lids on the kettles, and running his finger along the shelves and testing the milk and the eggs. He has given some Boston restaurants a perfect score; some have fared worse.

This, too, in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Not a few husky young men of Boston are at war, these days, up at Plattsburg.

Many of them, in those Plattsburg skirmishes, have been killed again and again.

Willard H. Davis, whom the Boston AMERICAN sent to Plattsburg to look into the matter, has thus far escaped with his life. He writes very interestingly of the fatalities to his companions, in the Sunday AMERICAN. Also—there are pictures!

Do you love your wife? Or your husband?

Of course you do.

But some don't!

What then? Should husband or wife leave the other when love flies out the window.

The Duke of Manchester discusses this matter in an exceedingly interesting fashion, in the Sunday AMERICAN.

The original little girl with the curl—you learned about her in your Mother Goose days—has been found.

There is a full page of photographs—exceedingly beautiful photographs, to be sure—of the young lady, and of every curl, in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Not to mention many other matters. Happy Hooligan, for instance, is married at last. His bride goes on their honeymoon. As for Happy—see the Sunday AMERICAN.

Trellis Hats—if you see one, you will recognize it from the name! The meaning of our dreams! What killed Ananias and Sapphira—and Hercules! Villa's interesting methods of dealing with his enemies! The absorbing question whether a kiss—even a kiss that lasted forty-five minutes—is worth an automobile! Vincent Astor's splendid memorial to his father!

All in the Sunday AMERICAN,
Try to get one.
